Loyalty File On Condon Subpenaed By Probers

Thomas Concedes FBI Didn't Find Official Involved With Soviet 'Spy'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Representative J. Parnell Thomas admitted yesterday that the FBI reported last May that there was no evidence that Dr. Edward U. Condon was involved in espionage activities in his contacts with an alleged Russian agent.

Thomas said the sentence was omitted from a report of a House Un-American Activities Subcommittee issued Monday, because an investigator copied only part of a letter written by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

He demanded that the Commerce Department, recipient of the Hoover letter, release it, and had a subpena served yesterday for the department's loyalty files on Condon, director of the U. S. Bureau of Standards in the Commerce Department.

It appeared last night, however, that the Commerce Department might well refuse to heed the subpena. High officials there emphasized that no decision had been reached, and that final word would rest with Secretary Harriman.

Cleared by Commerce Check

But among them there was a strong feeling that they should keep the entire files, including the Hoover letter, confidential.

The Commerce Department Loyalty Board unanimously cleared Condon of doubts as to his loyalty. Butt the Thomas Subcommittee report, based almost entirely on the Hoover letter, inferred subversive activities and called him "one of the weakest links" in America's atomic security.

It quoted a section of the Hoover letter, saying FBI files showed Condon had been characterized by "a self-confessed Soviet espionage agent" as a Russian spy.

Yesterday The Washington Post reported that this quote of the letter by Thomas did not contain a sentence that followed immediately thereafter. It exonerated Condon of subversive action in this association.

Later in the day, Thomas acknowledged that this was true. He insisted, however, that the subcommittee had released "every word" of the Hoover letter in its possession. A committee investigator, he said, had examined a copy of the letter but had not copied off the exonerating sentence.

Post Gets Exact Text

The exact text of the missing statement was secured by The Washington Post last night. It reads:

"There is no evidence to show that contacts between this individual and Dr. Condon were related to this individual's espionage activities."

Since the FBI makes a point of not drawing conclusions in its reports, reporting only facts, the sentence was considered particu-

Boy, 6, Facing 18th Operation To Provide Ears

Newark, N. J., March 3 (AP).—A cheerful, dark-haired boy, born without ears six years and 17 operations ago, today is well on his way to getting a pair through surgery.

Gary Lang, of Manchester, Conn., is in Baby's Hospital for an eighteenth operation, scheduled for tomorrow. Physicians predict two more years of plastic surgery are needed to complete normal ears.

The boy has been able to hear since October by use of a hearing aid which short circuits sound waves through his skull bones.

The ear is made of bits of rib cartilage, ground and packed into a mould of a human ear. When the cartilage knitted, it was grown to Gary's head. A series of operations now are needed to finish the contours of the ears.

Falls Church Moves to Add Square Mile

15,000 Population In Sections Town Would Take Over

The Town of Falls Church is taking steps to annex approximately one square mile of adjoining Fairfax County land with an estimated 15,000 population, it was learned yesterday.

To discuss the move, the Fairfax Board of Supervisors will meet soon with a special Falls Church committee, Supervisor C. B. Runyon said yesterday.

It was round one in a vast annexation "chess game" in nearby Virginia.

Falls Church observers pointed out that the move would:

1. Decisively put Falls Church into the "second-class" city bracket, making the new city a "buffer area" between Fairfax and any future Arlington County expansion.

2. Round out Falls Church to include areas now being serviced by the town, but returning no revenue.

20,000 Population Seen

A city of the second class, Falls Church needs a population of more than 5000. By special count made in 1945, the town had only 4341 residents.

Annexation and subsequent incorporation, observers said, would suddenly turn Falls Church into a brand new city—with a population of more than 20,000—about 4 "crow-fly" miles of the District line.

According to reliable reports, annexation is now slated to take in the East Greenway Downs, Jefferson Village, Lee Boulevard Heights, and Birch subdivisions, and include the remainder of Hillwood.

Tentative area boundaries would be Graham rd. on the West from Lee hwy. to Lee blvd.; Lee blvd. along the South side to Seven Corners; a portion of the Leesburg Pike on the south-west side, and the Arlington County line on the South-east side.

It would take in the projected King's Kitchen development near Seven Corners, which will contain 1700 living units and an estimated 3500 people.

A recent telephone company estimate set Fall's Church's population at 5800, and one town source said the area being considered for annexation had "conservativelyy" 15,5000 residents.

Move Defeated Before

Fear of an Arlington annexation move stems from that county's power at any time to vote itself a city of the first class.

Then, some Fairfax officials feel, Arlington would move to take in "fringe" Fairfax land, including that considered for addition to Falls Church.

Fairfax Supervisor Runyon said he had consulted with the board's acting chairman, Maurice W. Fox, and that the latter is ready to meet Falls Church officials on the matter.

Members of a special town committee now considering annexation are Town Attorney LaRue Van Meter, Town Manager Roy F. Dunn, and Councilmen J. H. McCarthy and Walter B. Follin.

In 1942, Falls Church had made its first move to annex most of the present area, excluding only the new Jefferson Village subdivision.

The move was fought in Fairfax Circuit Court by Greenway Downs, however, and blocked.

'Long-Shot' Tip Brings Arrests; Crimes Netted $8

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Police perseverance in tracking down a routine, one-of-a-thousand tip yesterd y led to the capture of two brothers as the slayers of two cab drivers in holdups here Friday night.

The youthful brothers, who, police say, have confessed to the brutal murders, revealed that the double robbery and killing netted them less than $8 in cash.

Charged and arraigned for first degree murder were Lawrence Joseph Garner, 23, of 2131 L st. nw., and George Alfred Garner, 25, of 28½ Hanover st. nw.

The Negro brothers, according to their confession to police, held up, robbed, beat, shot and killed two Negro taximen in rapid succession in what police describe as one of the "most vicious" crimes committed here in recent years.

Crimes in Same Area

The victims were James Hardy, 32, of 647 G st. ne., and Howard Jones, 37, of 417 Irving st. nw.

Hardy, mortally wounded, and the body of Jones were found within half a block of each other in a desolate section of Southeast Washington.

The cab drivers had been beaten with fists, slugged by bottle and gun-butt, and then shot.

The Garners told police they had not been drinking, and were cold-sober at both killings.

The brothers—both of whom agreed that Lawrence was the trigger-man in both slayings, according to police—failed to explain the sadistic beatings. Police theorized the victims were shot to prevent them from identifying their assailants.

A long-shot tip, a dog's slashed throat, a watch, a gun-clip were the clews that linked the Garner brothers to the killings.

Tip By Telephone

Detective Sergt. Ernst Winter of the robbery squad received the telephone tip around 10 a. m. Tuesday morning from a "halfway" acquaintance he hardly recognized by name. The caller was a "businessman" of the Second Police Precinct, where Winter once had pounded a beat and had done the tipster some long-forgotten favor.

The businessman explained that one of his employes had second or third-hand information on a crime which might possibly have something to do with the cab holdups.

Sergeant Winter, and his squad partner, Sergt. Randolph Dunn, immediately set out to interrogate the employe, and learned that his information was chiefly rumors. Lone specific items of information was his identification of the criminal in the rumor as a man who had once had trouble with the police because of slashing a dog's throat.

Name Found in Files

Following up this clew, the detective checked through the files and uncovered the fact that George Garner had been arrested in 1945 on such charge.

At this point, another detective, Sergt. Richard E. Meissner, joined the hunt, and by 4 that afternoon (Tuesday) had discovered where George was living, at the Hanover st. address.

Winter explained:

Truck Okays Anti-Truman Bill Revision

Way Open to Keep President's Name Off Ballot Under Existing Party Label

Stassen Faces N. H. Test

Richmond, Va., March 3 (AP).—A new subcommittee version of the "anti-Truman" election law bill tonight received the full approval of Gov. William M. Tuck.

Under the new measure, the way is still open to keep President Truman's name off the Virginia ballot as the nominee of the Democratic party. However, the new version would make it possible for the President's name to appear on the ballot by petition, but not under the name of an existing party.

The Governor defended the "broad objectives" of the original bill while conceding it may have been loosely drawn in some respects.

Tells of Revisions

"The revised draft," he said, "should remove all objections which could be raised by any reasonable citizen, cognizant of the peril which confronts us in the form of the so-called 'civil rights' program of President Truman now pending in Congress."

The new bill, however, still reserves to the State party conventions the authority to instruct electors on how to vote for President and Vice Presiden in the electoral college. The names of the electors and for whom they have been instructed to vote shall be filed with the State Board of Elections at least 30 days before the presidential election.

Even if the Democratic electors should be instructed to vote for someone other than the national Democratic nominee, the name of President Truman could go on the ballot—but not as the candidate of the Democratic Party of Virginia.

Mr. Truman could get on the ballot under the new proposal that any party could qualify with a petition of 1000 names or more, but not under the name of any existing party.

Open to Any Party

The new bill also would permit any party to present a slate of candidates and electors that polled five per cent of the last general election vote, instead of the 10 per cent in the original bill. They also could qualify by petition, opening the way for Henry Wallace's third party to appear.

The first bill, which excluded the Wallace party, later was amended to permit any party to appear on the presidential ballot that had qualified in 10 other States.

Under the substitute proposal parties would be designated on the ballot and the names of the electors would be headed by the names of the candidates, in parentheses, that they would support.

The substitute will be offered by patrons of the original measure to the privileges and elections committees of the House and Senate prior to a public hearing tomorrow night.

MacArthur Makes Plea For Chinese

Frontier in Orient As Important as One in Europe, He Cables Congress

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, declaring that America's "frontiers" in the Orient and Europe are of equal importance, warned yesterday that China's military troubles must be settled before United States economic aid will help much.

The American occupation chief in Japan sent a long cable to the House Foreign Affairs Committee which seemed to take issue with key points of Administration foreign policy.

No Outright Bid for Aid

Congressional backers of increased military aid to China welcomed MacArthur's statement as supporting their stand. He did not actually urge additional military help to Chiang Kai-shek, but stressed the position of China in United States global strategy.

"We are prone," he said, "to over concentrate on happenings and events to our east and to underestimate the importance of those to our west."

President Truman has proposed an outlay of 570 millions for nonmilitary aid to China. That proposal, along with the European Recovery Program and 275 millions in additional military aid to Greece and Turkey are before the committee.

MacArthur stressed the "military problem" in China and said that the need for "internal reform" there is "infinitively" less important than ending the civil war.

Marshall Differs With Bullitt

The question of aid to China came up earlier in the day at a hearing before the committee on the Greek-Turkish bill. Secretary of State George C. Marshall was asked about the proposal of William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Russia, for extensive military help to China.

Marshall said tersely that he didn't agree with Bullitt's plan.

From Marshall and Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal, the committee heard a sober warning that we must extend further military assistance to Greece and Turkey or let those two strategic countries succumb to Communism.

Marshall and Forrestal conceded that the number of Greek guerillas had nearly doubled since the American aid program was launched last year, but predicted substantial improvement in the military situation within a few months.

"The situation is serious, but it is not without hope," said Marshall.

Organization of Greek militia forces—now well under way—will release regular army troops from defense of the villages in the north, so they can take the offense against the Communist guerillas. Arrival of Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, in Greece as head of the United States military mission, has put "new ardor and zeal" into their army, he added.

Neither official could give assurance that the additional 275 millions asked for Greece and Tur-

Vatican Asks Voters to Back Church Rights

Statement in Effect Urges Defeat of Leftist Candidates

Vatican City, March 3 (AP).—A decree from the Vatican's consistorial congregation was published today warning Catholics to vote for only those candidates who "defend the rights of the church."

The decree from what may be considered the most important administrative organization at the Vatican did not mention communism by name. But it definitely placed Vatican approval on the efforts of church officials who have been urging Catholics to vote against the leftists when Italians choose their first republican parliament April 18.

Vatican sources said the decree was issued some time ago and was valid for Catholics throughout the world, as well as Italy.

The Communist press tonight bitterly assailed the decree, calling it the beginning of a "clerical offensive to prevent the success of the popular front."

The decree said the sacred congregation "considering the dangers to which religion and public good are exposed, whose gravity demands the united collaboration of the honest, warns all those who have the right to vote . . . that they are in conscience strictly and gravely obliged to make use of that right.

"Catholics may give their vote only to those candidates and to those lists of candidates from which there is the certainty they will respect and defend observance of the divine law and rights of religion and the church in private and public life."

The leftist press again today attacked Alfredo Ildefonso Cardinal Schuster, Archbishop of Milan, who recently ordered priests in his diocese to refuse absolution—forgiveness of sins—to adherents of the Communist Party.

Alessio Cardinal Ascalesi, Archbishop of Naples, 17 other archbishops and 55 bishops of southern Italy, recently declared in a letter that "nobody can at the same time be a good Catholic and a Socialist."

Dr. Juraj Slavik suddenly resigned yesterday as Ambassador of Czechoslovakia to fight openly against the Red masters of his country.

"Czechoslovakia has become a fully totalitarian state," Slavik angrily told reporters he had summoned to the embassy. "I wish to live as a free man, and I want my nation to be a community of free men.

"I cannot accept as legal the government nominated by President Benes under duress and terror."

Envoy to Canada Quits

At Ottawa at almost the same time, Frantisek Nemec, Czech Minister to Canada, also announced his resignation.

Later Slavik told The Washington Post he might take part in forming a Czech national committee, a government in exile, in the United States. He would not, he added, join at this time any international Slavic movements such as the International Peasant Union established here last July 4.

"I am working now," he declared in a voice vibrant with emotion, "for a free Czechoslovakia."

At his earlier press conference Slavik had intimated his interest in forming an exiled government.

"I am confident," he said then, "that I do not stand alone, and I know that there will be more of my colleagues who will act as I do now. There will be Czechoslovak patriots who will fight for the same ideals. The great majority of my compatriots at home have the same convictions and ideals, and are in

Lovett Hints Of Guarantee To Defend West Europe

Aid Debate Listless

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett hinted yesterday that the United States might guarantee the defense of western Europe—but only after the European themselves had formed a defensive union.

This was the first official intimation that American policymakers were considering such a guarantee. It came on the eve of today's conference in Brussels of Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, to respond to Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's recent "western union" proposal.

It came, also, after insistent demands in the Senate—repeated yesterday for the second successive day—for some kind of political or military answer to the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia.

U. S. Policy Studied

Lovett told a press conference that American policy toward a western European union was now being worked out, but made clear that its completion would have to await the results of the Brussels meeting. After all, he said, you can't put a roof on a house until the house has been built.

He safeguarded himself by saying that a military guarantee to western Europe would be 'a complicated business involving many parts of the Government. He emphasized, however, that the United States had welcomed Bevin's proposal, had encouraged the idea of western union, and probably would take quick action to support a decision by the Brussels conference.

His careful words suggested a parallel between the situation now and last June, when ERP was launched. Last June it was an American suggestion, from Secretary Marshall at Harvard, which produced a European response in the form of a program drawn up by 16 nations.

This time the corresponding suggestion has come from Bevin, and the United States is planning to respond when the moment is ripe. In each case the initiative is being left carefully to the Europeans themselves.

Perhaps for the same reason, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg yesterday pleaded earnestly against a proposal by Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) to make the "political unification" of Europe one of the stated goals of the European recovery bill.

Fulbright argued that the bill as it stood was not "affirmative" enough; that economic recovery without political unity would be "a mere palliative," and that Europe's only hope of survival was in coming together. He was supported by Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) and Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), who argued that political leaders in Europe needed such encouragement from the United States

Vandenberg, who found Fulbright's motive "laudable and worthy," nevertheless argued that there was a vast difference between

See AID, Page 2, Column 7.

Vandenberg Doesn't Expect 'Overt Act'

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg doesn't think Russia or her satellites will commit an "overt act" leading to war.

He reminded the Senate yesterday that every Communist seizure of power so far had been by "internal infiltration" rather than by armed attack. He thought passage of ERP would bulwark the love of liberty in the remaining free nations.

"Then the only danger of war will be an overt act," he said. "There has been no overt act, and I very much doubt that there will be."

MRS. CHRISTINE JOHNSTON

GOV. JAMES E. FOLSOM
Named in paternity suit

By The Associated Press

Alabama's Gov. James E. (Big Jim) Folsom declared yesterday that politics lay behind court suits that ask that he be declared the common law husband of a red-haired divorcee and the father of her 22-month-old son.

The suits were filed in Cullman, Ala., Tuesday on behalf of Christine Putman Folsom, also known as Mrs. Christie Johnston, and her baby son, James Douglas.

Folsom, here to testify at a congressional hearing, told reporters: "I am in a political campaign in Alabama. I have had to face this type of tactics in other campaigns. That is all I have to say on that subject."

The 6-foot 8-inch Governor, who has announced his availability as a Democratic presidential nominee, arrived here yesterday morning after an all-night drive from Montgomery. He had left the Alabama capital before the suits were filed.

Folsom is a widower and has two daughters, 8 and 5 years old. He is 39.

60-Year Maximum Term Faced

Jury Finds Christoffel Guilty On All Six Counts of Perjury

Harold Christoffel, Milwaukee labor leader, last night was convicted of perjury charges by a Federal District Court.

He was convicted on all counts of a six-count indictment in which he was charged with falsely testifying under oath that he had never been a Communist or been connected with the Communist Party.

The jury was out five hours. Christoffel, without show of emotion, was immediately committed to jail by Judge Edward M. Curran. He had been at liberty on bond. He was led away by United States marshals after the verdict was announced.

Judge Curran granted five days to ask for a new trial. Sentence was deferred until then.

Under the District of Columbia perjury law, Christoffel is subject to a sentence of 2 to 10 years on each count an no fine. The maximum thus would be 60 years.

Charges against Christoffel arose from statements made on March 1, 1947, to the House Labor Committee studying labor unrest at various plants, including the Milwaukee plant of Allis-Chalmers Co. Christoffel was a former president of a CIO-United Auto Workers Union there.

One count on the indictment was based on his statement that he did not know two men described in testimony as Communist leaders. Government witnesses said he had had frequent meetings with the men.

The jury began deliberation at 3:07 p. m. yesterday, but 2½ hours later asked for new instructions from the court.

Truman Asks Classification Revision, Small Pay Raises

By Jerry Klutz
Post Reporter

A complete revision of the Classification Act, which would bring about small pay raises for the 800,000 Federal workers whose salaries are fixed by it, was recommended to Congress yesterday by the President.

In his message to Congress the President said the revision would correct "the dislocation and many inequities in salary rates resulting from the enactment of piecemeal pay laws in the past." Any further "patchwork amendments," he said, will stand in the way of efficient salary administration.

The President sidestepped the hot Federal pay raise issue. He merely referred to it in this sentence:

"In my opinion, the Congress should enact these recommendations into law irrespective of what the final decision may be as to further pay increases for Federal employes generally."

However, it is known that the Administration has drafted several pay raise plans, each based on the revision of the Classification Act. The general revamping of that act as proposed yesterday would give most employes a "minor" pay raise. But in addition, the Administration has two others: (1) to give Classification Act people an average increase of about $500, and (2) a second plan that would raise the average to $800.

The Civil Service Commission made it plain in its annual report

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Gov. James E. Folsom

Alabama's king-sized Governor, "Big Jim" Folsom, has been called a clown, a great lover, a great humanitarian, another Huey Long and—now—the father of a child born out of wedlock.

Those designations that he likes he accepts; those that put him to ridicule he scorns as "politics."

"Big Jim," who arrived in Washington yesterday to testify before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee in connection with the tidelands dispute, adopts the same philosophy in stating his views.

"There's three arguments," he once told an interviewer, "that never end—religion, politics and race. I try to never get into them. Just say I'm for everything that's good and against everything that's bad."

Alabama's Biggest

"Big Jim"—or James Elisha Folsom, to give him his full name—stands 6 feet 8, wears a size 18 collar and wears size 15½ shoes. He may not be the best Governor Alabama has ever had—but he's the biggest.

The 39-year-old kissing Governor (he once bragged that he kissed 50,000 women during his campaigning) was elected to office in 1946 after he stumped the State with a mop and bucket promising to clean up the State capital.

He won voters, too, with his plan for a new State welfare program. The program included a $50-a-month pension for everyone over 65 and called for repeal of the poll tax. His critics say the program would cost twice as much as Alabama's entire annual income.

The CIO in Alabama supported "Big Jim" in 1946, influenced no little by the fact that he had split with the Alagama delegation to the 1944 national Democratic convention and supported Henry Wallace for ith vice presidential nomination.

Wallace Support Explained

Last year "Big Jim" explained that he supported Wallace in '44 "because all the big city machines was for Truman and I never did like machines." He said he was "sure glad" though that Mr. Truman "got in."

In recent months, "Big Jim" hasn't been so sure he was glad. Last January 27 he bitterly denounced President Truman and the Administration and announced that he would be willing to accept the Presidential bid at the Democratic convention this year.

Since cramping his big frame into the Governor's chair at Montgomery, Ala., "Big Jim" has feuded with "them lyin' newspapers" and their reporters. He recently banned reporters from Alabama daily newspapers at his press conferences.

A native of Coffee County, Ala., where his father served for nearly two decades as county commissioner, sheriff and tax collector, "Big Jim" has been a widower since 1944. He has two children, both girls.

Detective Sergeants

Winter and Dunn

Detective Sergeants Ernst H. Ernst H. Winter and Randolph L. (Dan) Dunn have been partners in crime-busting since last August.

Captors of the supects in Washington's recent cab driver killing, the policemen were teamed shortly after they were promoted to the robbery squad on outstanding records. Both started their police careers in the Second Precinct.

Winter, 36-year-old father of two children, has been on the force since July, 1938, and is a veteran of service in the Marines and the Coast Guard. His record, studded with commendations, shows a steady rise from patrolman to his robbery squad appointment last August 1. He lives at 309 Pennwood dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Dunn, also 36, was appointed to the force in December, 1936, and rose on a similar good record until his promotion to detective sergeant on the robbery squad a year ago. He lives with his wife in Kaywood Gardens.

He was commended for a leading part in solving the robbery-murder of Herman Sirkis in his liquor store, 4824 Deane ave. ne., February 26, 1940, by two bandits.

George B. Maddock

The price you pay for food is of almost as much concern to 42-year-old George B. Haddock of the Justice Department's antitrust division as it is to your pocketbook.

Several months ago, after Attorney General Tom Clark announced a broad-scale program to investigate rising costs of food, clothing and housing, Haddock was placed in general charge of the antitrust division's food section.

Since early January he has been personally leading a battery of five other division attorneys in presenting information to the special grand jury investigating possible efforts to fix milk prices here.

Haddock, cautious and taciturn, entered the antitrust division in 1939, after service with the Federal Trade Commission and the National Recovery Administration in trade regulations. He rose rapidly within the division, being named assistant chief of the general litigation and trial section in 1942.

He studied at the University of Idaho and National University Law School here, and practiced law in his home State of Idaho before entering Government service. He lives at. 10617 South Dunmoor drive, Silver Spring, with his wife and two children.

British Draw $100,000,000, Last of Loan

Britain yesterday drew the last 100 million dollars of its $3,750,000,000 American loan, but the European Recovery Program is expected to prevent any sharp break in the postwar flow of dollars to His Majesty's government.

American officials are satisfied that the final 100 million dollars, together with dollar-saving measures, will tide Britain over until the first ERP payment is made.

The Administration's plans call for ERP to go into action April 1. That is the date Congress is shooting for. Under tentative Administration plans, Britain would get around $1,378,000,000 during the first 12 months of the plan's operation. This estimate is based on the $5,300,000,000 12-month figure voted by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The Treasury announced Britain's withdrawal of the last of its huge postwar loan in a little over half the time the money was originally supposed to last. The loan was granted July 16, 1946, and was intended to be used over a 3-to-5-year period.

Britain's continued financial crisis, however, plus rapidly rising American prices, caused the British to use it all up ahead of schedule.

Under the loan agreement, Britain is due to begin repayment in 1951. The first payment, including interest which Britain can waive if she is financially embarrassed at the time, is 120 million dollars. Another 20 million dollars is due at the same time on a Lend-Lease and surplus property loan which was made along with the $3,750,000,000 straight loan.

key would be all that will be required to bolster them militarily against communism. But they stressed that we cannot afford not to extend such aid.

Marshall revealed that the total is slated to be divided 200 millions for Greece and 75 millions for Turkey. It is all military aid. Economic assistance for the two countries is provided in the separate ERP program, with the total for the next fiscal year equaling the sum provided for this year.

Members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee are split over the question of putting ERP, Greek-Turkish military assistance and aid for China in one bill.

Under questioning yesterday, Marshall said he had no objection to putting ERP and Chinese aid into one bill, but felt it might be unwise to wrap up military aid with the Marshall Plan.

General MacArthur's telegram to the House committee turned down an invitation to come home for testimony on the aid programs. He said he couldn't leave his post just now and that anyway he had no detailed knowledge of the Chinese problem.

China is outside his theater and he does not get copies of the reports of investigations by American officials there. The Far Eastern commander then went ahead to answer "in general" some questions put by the committee.

"A free, independent, peaceful and friendly China is of profound importance to the peace of the world and to the position of the United States," MacArthur said. "Underlying all issues in China is now the military problem. Until it is resolved little progress can be expected toward internal rehabilitation regardless of the extent of outside aid."

Soviet Union Trade Chief Is Replaced

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
A. V. LYUBIMOV,

Moscow, March 3 (AP).—A. V. Lyubimov, minister of trade, has been displaced for unsatisfactory work and a new minister appointed, the Soviet press revealed today.

Lyubimov had been in charge of most of the Soviet Union's retail network. His successor is V. B. Zhavoronkov, Communist Party leader who made a name for himself in the defense of Tula during the war.

Coupled with this announcement were these developments:

S. V. Kaftanov, minister of higher education, sharply criticized Russian scientists for their "formalism" and said they should serve the nation and party without reservations or conditions.

Pravda, Communist Party organ, told railroads they must increase average daily carloadings this year by 14 per cent.

Pravda said scientists at Molotov University for many years had devoted an inordinate amount of attention to the problem of the multiplication of spiders, while vital agricultural problems had been neglected.

Defense Pact Is Justified, Spaak Says

Brussels, Belgium, March 3 (U.P.) Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs Paul-Henri Spaak said today there is only one war the democratic countries will accept—"the war that is forced upon them and usually won."

Spaak, who addressed the Chamber of Deputies on foreign affairs, also—

1. Praised the European Recovery Program, but warned it must be close to 5 billion dollars a year if Europe is to survive.

2. Acclaimed the forthcoming five-power defense treaty among Britain, France and the Benelux states, comparing it to the network of alliances between Russia and her satellites in eastern Europe.

The conference in which Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg are expected to work out within two weeks a pact against aggression "from any source", opens here tomorrow.

"Eastern Europe is organized economically, socially and militarily. This does not constitute a threat to peace and I am not criticizing. But I am reminding Communists at home and abroad that we are perfectly justified in doing the same thing in western Europe," Spaak asserted.

"Democracies are incapable of engaging in aggressive policy because the people still have something to say. There is only one war that democracies accept and that is the war that is forced upon them and usually won," Spaak said.

"I underline—that they are usually won."

Model for Europe

French Favor Pact Like Americas'

Paris, March 3 (NYHT).—France was reported tonight to have accepted the Inter-American defense treaty as the best model on which to build a western European alliance.

The pact provides for collective action in the Western Hemisphere against both armed and political aggression.

When the five-power conference in Brussels was first talked about, Britain and France favored following the lines of their own Dunkirk alliance, which is aimed against Germany. But Czechoslovak developments, as well as apprenhension about Finland, have made it apparent to France, if not to Britain, that a purely anti-German treaty now is inadequate.

It was reported the French government was preparing a measure for compulsory military service in all parts of the French union. Heretofore, only metropolitan France has been subject to the draft.

Another development was publication of a National Assembly commission report urging that "the organization of naval bases in French North and West Africa" be given an order of "importance

French Demand for Equal Say On Ruhr Threatens Conference

London, March 3 (AP).—Diplomatic officials said today French demands for an equal say with the United States and Britain on control of the Ruhr have become a major issue in the three-power talks on Germany's future.

The dispute threatens to delay major decisions on expanding Germany's production to aid the Marshall Plan.

The French stand has the support of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, who are sitting in on the conference. Britain objects.

The United States was reported supporting the French claim on condition that France agree to merge her occupation zone with the British and American zones.

Talks among Russia, Britain, France and the United States on an Austrian settlement appear to be getting nowhere. Samuel Reber, representing the United States in a deputy foreign ministers' meeting, today called Russia's bill for a peace treaty "too high." The Soviet Union is seeking 200 million dollars, two thirds of Austria's oil for 50 years and control of Danube shipping.

a European and an American move toward European political union.

"If such a thing evolves as a result of economic cooperation, that would be a happy prospect," he said. But he thought any mention of "political unification" in the present bill might embarrass "some of the exposed European nations, who are exhibiting a high degree of heroism in even being willing to discuss a European Recovery Program."

It might, he felt, even drive them out of the 16-nation group which has already promised to cooperate for economic recovery.

Earlier in the third day of the ERP debate, Vandenberg rejected a proposal by Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) to create a brand-new world Supreme Council with armed forces to stop aggression. The new Council would act under a majority vote of the great powers without a single-nation vote.

Vandenberg first pointed out that this would give foreign countries the power to declare the United States in a state of war without its consent. The Senate, he said, would never stand for that.

He conceded that "there is a very substantial possibility of developing the authority of the so-called regional pacts under the Charter" to deal with sectional problems. But he declined to say whether a pact between the United States and western Europe would be a "regional pact" of the kind envisioned unde rthe Charter.

With mock solemnity, he said he felt "overwhelmed" at Ball's achievement in writing "a new charter for the peace of the world" and "within the last few minutes." He called it "the overnight product of a few of my eminent colleagues," and said that even though the Senate contained "96 towering geniuses" it could not do the job qutie so easily.

"As far as this measure is concerned," he said angrily, "it is what lawyers call 'irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial.'"

Ball, obviously nettled, said he could only hope that "the powers-that-be in the United States Government are not still 'studying' and 'exploring' this problem when the Iron Curtain clanks down on the western shores of Europe."

"I only hope," Vandenberg retorted, raising his voice almost to a shout, "that the Senate of the United States is not still bogged down in collateral discussions so long that it will be impossible to pass economic recovery legislation before it is too late!"

Applause swept the galleries at this retort, although the Senate's rules forbid such demonstrations.

There were so many empty chairs at the start of yesterday's debate, and so few speakers ready, that Republican whip Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) proposed recessing for the day. Vandenberg was bitter about it.

"I doubt if the country will understand what is going on here," he said, "unless we can begin tomorrow in dead earnest to attend to the utterly desperate responsibilities we face."

The wrangle between Ball and Vandenberg kept the debate alive, but for long stretches of the afternoon there were no more than a dozen Senators on the floor. At no time were more than 30 Senators present.

Toward the end of the sometimes aimless four-hour discussion, Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) and 11 others filed an amendment to strike out the provision of the ERP bill permitting the chartering of 300 surplus American merchant ships to Europe. Brewster said the bill as it stood would throw 15,000 American seamen out of work and would "strike a serious blow at the vitality of the American merchant marine."

The Washington Post yesterday incorrectly reported that an amendment by Senators Bushfield and Young called for a wheat carry-over of at least 150 million bushels. Actually the amendment would delete a provision of the interim aid act of last December which required such a carry-over.

'Routine' Moves

Soviet Shifts Troops Near Czech Line

Frankfurt, Germany, March 3 (AP).—U. S. army officers said today 10,000 or more Russian troops had moved in the past month to an area near the borders of Czechoslovakia and the American zone of Germany.

They said, however, these movements within the Soviet zone of Germany seemed to be in connection with routine spring maneuvers. The officers were commenting on a report in the German newspaper Hessische Nachrichten that the Russian troop movements coincided with the Communist rise in power in Czechoslovakia.

"It is true," a U. S. army agent told newsmen, "that the Russians moved troops into the general area below Leipzig. In one case there were 10,000 men in six trainloads. They hopped out and started digging trenches.

"Our evaluation is that there is no cause for alarm. That is the same general idea where the Russians held their maneuvers last spring. Spring came early this year, and they probably started their maneuvers earlier."

U. S. to Be Asked To Ban It From Approved List

Prague, March 3 (NYHT).—As a result of summary expulsions of students and professors from ancient Charles University, the United States State Department and the Veterans' Administration will be asked to withdraw the institution from the approved list of schools for Americans, it was learned authoritatively tonight.

Washington will be told the university, which will mark its 600th anniversary next month, is "no longer an academic but a propaganda institution." Communist-sponsored action committees have taken over student activities and professorial boards.

Of the 23 American students, one has already resigned. The others are seeking American Embassy advice.

Officials Resign

Two American officials in the International Union of Students, which has its headquarters here, have resigned.

William Ellis, vice president of the organization, which is now predominantly Communist, and Jim Smith, of Houston, Tex., resigned.

Milton D. Graham, former GI who resigned from Charles University, said: 108 students were sentenced to terms of from two to 14 days for participating in last week's demonstration.

A court order confiscating the U. S. I. S. bulletins of February 27 and 28 was delivered to Joseph Kolarek, press attache at the American Embassy today.

The order objected to quotation of portions of a speech by Representative Carl Stefan (R., Nebr.) and reproductions of editorial in United States newspapers.

Comments by Columnists Joseph and Stewart Alsop, and Elmer Davis quoted in the bulletin were regarded as "untruthful reports violating in a coarse and inciting manner the dignity of the republic."

A Communist action committee today changed the controlling makeup of the Society for Cultural Relations with the United States, a Czech organization, without consulting the American Embassy officials.

Another action committee was busy reforming the Czechoslovak Red Cross.

[The United Press said the interior ministry announced today that two parliamentary deputies and an unspecified number of police, all National Socialists, would be charged with implication in an attempted mutiny against the state. Specific details were not disclosed.

[Deputies Ota Hora and J. Cizek were arrested last week despite their parliamentary immunity, but were released later. They were expected to be rearrested soon.]

Briton Sees 'Kiss of Death' For Finland

London, March 3 (AP).—Lord Pakenham, government spokesman in the House of Lords, declared today Finland "is being approached with the kiss of death."

He said the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia was "Hitlerite in technique and utterly damnable in every way."

Then, looking to the future of another country which might become a target for Communist expansion, he said:

"Whatever happens, the people of Austria can rest assured of our unshakable support for the integrity and independence of their country."

Asking "how can the world be saved from communism without war?" Lord Pakenham said:

"The first answer lies in the sphere of defense and very vitally necessary it is.

"We must spare no effort to live in charity with Russia . . .

"If we succeed, as I believe we shall, with the aid of the Marshall Plan, we shall win not only western Europe but eastern Europe as well."

Conservative Leader Lord Salisbury said Britain must act quickly to prevent "the swallowing up of western Europe by the east. The sands are running out and time is running very short."

Finn Refusal Reported on Military Pact

Helsinki, Finland, March 3 (U.P.).—President Juho K. Paasikivi has informed Russia that Finland will not sign a mutual assistance treaty patterned after the Soviet military pacts with Romania and Hungary, it was reported today.

Authoritative sources said Paasikivi made this point clear in a conference last Saturday with the Russian minister, Lieut. Gen. G. M. Savonenkov.

The sources emphasized, however, that Paasikivi expressed no opposition to entering negotiations with Russia for some kind of pact. He is still awaiting political party replies to questions he posed about the treaty, and has made no public statement pro or con.

The President was understood to have objected to clause No. 2 of the Romanian and Hungarian treaties. It specifies that "one party shall, in case of war, give the other all military and other support necessary and do so by all means available."

Paasikivi reportedly told Savonenkov and, later, his cabinet, that such a clause would permit Russia to send Finnish troops anywhere it pleased in case of war. The full Finnish cabinet discussed the proposal tonight for the first time.

Athens Reports Revival of Guerilla 'Navy'

Athens, Greece, March 3 (U.P.).—The royalist newspaper Estia reported today the Greek navy had been ordered to search all suspicious vessels because of a revival of the Greek Communist "navy."

It was the first report of Communist "naval" activity since the 1944 leftist revolt.

The Ministry of War announced 17 prisoners were killed in Makronisos prison camp when Communist prisoners rioted.

Maj. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, commander of the American military mission, left today by plane for Larissa, 130 miles north of Athens, to tour Greek army installations.

Athens newspapers quoted the guerilla radio as saying their forces have taken nearly 5000 children up to 14 years of age to Yugoslavia and other nations.

agreement with us in this great cause."

He said he expected the Soviet-controlled regime at Prague would "react very strongly against this decision of mine," which was reached at once when the crisis came." He delayed putting it into effect, he explained, because "it took time to make preparations and consult with my colleagues."

He expected, he said, that his resignation would be "followed by some moves in European and Western Hemisphere capitals." Shortly after Soviet seizure of the Czech government, he added, he had a talk with Nemec, but he did not elaborate.

On the heels of Slavik's announcement here, Nemec resigned with "practically all my staff."

Slavik said he did not know whether any members of the embassy here would follow his own course. They were notified, he explained, "only two or three minutes" before he confronted reporters and announced his intention to resign; and "they were a little surprised."

Two American employes of the embassy did quit soon after Slavik left. They were Mrs. Tanya Sturman, telephone clerk, and Mrs. Barbara Jane Board, typist.

After making the announcement to the embassy staff and to reporters, Slavik said, he went to his home at 501 Aspen st., Takoma Park, and wrote a cable to President Eduard Benes. He told Benes, he said, merely "that I had resigned this afternoon and had announced it at a press conference."

Then, Slavik said, he notified the State Department and representatives here of Cuba, the Dominican Republic and Haiti, to which he also was accredited.

His most important task at the moment, said Slavik is to pack up and move out of the Takoma Park house, which is owned by the Czech government. He has lived there since January 1947, with his wife, Mme. Gita Slavik, and their 18-year-old son George, a recent graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School. He expects to go, for the time being, to a hotel.

He will write for a while, Slavik said, working on several books and articles already planned. As for his further expectations, he said he would meet next Sunday in New York with some of his countrymen to celebrate the anniversary of Thomas G. Masaryk, first Czech President.

Resignation Assailed

Prague, Czechoslovakia, March 3 (U.P.).—The official radio tonight said the resignation of Dr. Juraj Slavik as Ambassador to Washington was "dishonorable and dishonest," and predicted other "reactionary" Czechoslovak diplomats would follow his lead.

Britain to Use 'All Measures' Needed to Retain Falklands

London, March 3 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin told the Commons today that British ships and officials had been ordered "to take all necessary measures" to safeguard British title to the Falkland Island dependencies.

The islands in the Antarctic are the subject of a territorial dispute among Britain, Argentina and Chile.

Bevin said two cruisers also had been sent to British Honduras in Central America because "the government considered it wise . . . to insure the protection of life and property."

"I have offered to settle this business, to discuss it, but if there is any threat to take force, to injure life, it is his majesty's government's duty, apart from the merits of the case, to take the necessary steps," he added

He said the British minister in Guatemala had reported that a resolution was put forward in the Guatemalan Congress on February 23 "advocating an immediate invasion of British Honduras" but the President of Guatemala had "refused to accept this resolution."

Palestine Partition Approval Is Blocked

Canada and China Call for Effort By Big Powers to Effect Conciliation

Lake Success, March 3 (AP).—Canada and China blasted today an American attempt to get quick Security Council approval for the Palestine partition plan.

These countries told the United Nations Security Council the five great powers must make supreme efforts to settle the Palestine question by conciliation.

They made it virtually certain that the Council would not approve a resolution pressed by Warren R. Austin, United States chief delegate, to put the Council definitely on record for partition and call on the five great powers to consult with Jews, Arabs and British for a peaceful settlement.

China, Canada, Syria and Belgium are definitely opposed to the United States resolution and Britain will abstain. Thus the United States plan would not obtain the required majority of seven votes out of the 11.

The Council adjourned until Friday before taking a vote.

14 Arabs Die, 27 Injured in Haifa Blast

Jerusalem, March 3 (AP).—A truck laden with 400 pounds of explosives blasted a seven-story Arab building in Haifa today, killing 14 Arabs and injuring 27.

The violence coincided with the arrival here of the first representatives of the United Nations Commission that will attempt to work out partition of the Holy Land.

Six members of the commission secretariat moved into a private apartment under heavy police guard. They were taken in armored cars to their barbed wire enclosed residence.

The Jewish Stern gang claimed it was responsible for the Haifa blast. The explosion gutted the seven-story Salameh Building and damaged others for four blocks along Stanton st.

A Stern gang communique said the Salameh Building was district headquarters for an Arab military group. Police said this was "nonsense."

Police said many children were among today's blast victims.

Other incidents in Palestine today took lives of six more Arabs and three Jews. The unofficial death toll since November 29 reached 1562.

[Hagana said the British League of Former Servicemen had claimed full responsibility for the Ben Yehuda bombing in a document circulated to foreign consulates here. Hagana said the letter "promised to finish Hitler's job" and ended with the words, "Down with the labor government which is Jew-inspired."

Yemen Prince Reported Besieged by New King

Aden, Saudi Arabia, March 2 (Delayed) (U.P.).—The San'a radio reported today that four armies under the banner of the new King of Yemen are besieging insurgent Prince Seif el Islam Ahmed in the walled mountain stronghold of Hagga.

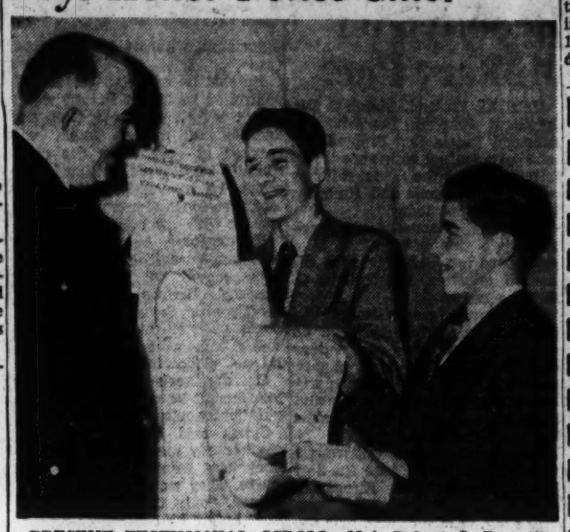
The radio at San'a, the capital, which is controlled by the Imam (King), Abdullah el Wazir, contradicted earlier reports that Ahmed's troops and the King's armies were battling on the outskirts of san'a itself.

2 Prisoners Cut Way Out With Can Opener

Ardmore, Okla., March 3 (AP).—It was bad enough to have two prisoners escape from the Carter County jail, Sheriff Howard Johnson moaned today, but the way they got out was rubbing it in too much.

The pair, Bill Bryson, 24, and Harold Baker, 19, cut through the wall with a can opener.

Boys Honor Police Chief



PRESENT TESTIMONIAL SCROLL—Maj. Robert J. Barrett, chief of police, who was guest of honor at the "Victory Luncheon" staged yesterday by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club in the Mayflower Hotel, receives a testimonial scroll from Joe Wilkinson, 15, of 302 South Carolina ave. se., and Freddie Stone, 14, of 1011 K st. se.

A 15-foot scroll bearing the names of thousands of members of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club was presented yesterday to Police Chief Robert J. Barrett.

Occasion was the "victory" luncheon of the club's campaign for $125,000, which went way over the top. About 150 persons attended the function in Hotel Mayflower.

The scroll was presented to Barrett by Fred Stone, 14, of 1011 K st. se., who explained that the "boys . . . like the things you have done for them." The youth was accompanied by Joe Wilkinson, 15, of 302 South Carolina ave. se.

The police chief and members of the force were praised by John A. Remon, retiring president of the club, for helping to make the campaign a success. Others active in the drive, which overshot its goal by at least $40,000, were also cited. Among them was Mrs. Louise Fraser, 77, of 149 R st. ne., oldest member of the club's women's auxiliary.

Barrett, in a brief address, thanked the members of his department "for the good job they've done" and observed that "it does a policeman good to know the people on his beat."

Robert C. Simmons, chairman of the fund-raising campaign and new club president, announced that the organization hopes to "double the number of boys which we can aid" and to "have a club in each precinct." He revealed that some 50,000 adults signed up for memberships in the Police Boys Club during the drive. Police assisted by soliciting from door to door.

Veterans Administration approved 863,308 applications for national service life insurance during 1946, increasing to more than 19,100,000 the total approved to date.

The hang of the sleeves . . . the fullness across the chest . . . the drape of the shoulders . . . all help achieve the Alan Neil Look . . . again yours to enjoy this Spring. HOUR

from the New York Times

It is not quite ten years since Maxim Litvinoff, then Soviet Foreign Commissar, stood before the League of Nations Assembly in Geneva and made the first speech ever to be broadcast directly from the floor of the League chambers. The subject of that speech was the heartbreak of a small state in Central Europe. "Czechoslovakia," said Mr. Litvinoff, "is suffering interference in its internal affairs at the hands of a neighboring state." The independence of "one of the oldest, most cultured, most hard-working of European peoples" was in danger. "I am sure, ladies and gentlemen, that the sympathies, if not of all governments, at any rate of all peoples represented in this Assembly, go out to the Czechoslovak people in this, its terrible hour of trial."

The wheel of fate has turned in ten years. Litvinoff, when last heard of, was in forced retirement. The "neighboring state" of which he spoke as then threatening Czechoslovakia's independence has been destroyed in a titanic war. But a new neighbor, employing the same familiar pressures, has taken the old neighbor's place. Once more the sympathies of the peoples of the world "go out to the Czechoslovak people in this, its terrible hour of trial."

For such value as it may have for propaganda purposes, the empty formalities of a false democratic procedure are apparently to be observed. The ill and weary Benes swears in the stacked Cabinet which "could only have evil results." Parliamentary "approval" is assured. But, behind this facade, the right of free speech ends, the opposition is dispersed, the hunt is on for dissidents. For the second time in a decade "one of the oldest, most cultured, most hard-working of European peoples" feels the hob-nailed boots of the totalitarians.

Opposed Gangster Paroles, Clark Says

Attorney General Tells House Committee That He Cannot Control Action of Board

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Attorney General Tom C. Clark told Congress yesterday that the Department of Justice had opposed the paroling of four former Chicago mobsters and suggested congressional action to strengthen the United States Parole Board.

Clark testified before a subcommittee of the House Committee on Executive Expenditures, which is investigating the paroles granted last summer to four gangster-heirs of Al Capone's underworld empire after they had served one-third of a 10-year sentence for a conspiracy to extort one million dollars from the movie industry.

The cases arose out of the convictions of Willie Bioff and George E. Browne, West Coast labor leaders, who were convicted of a shakedown of the movie industry on threats of union violence.

Flaring up at what he called "innuendos and insinuations" against him and the Department of Justice, Clark declared he could no more control the actions of the Board of Paroles than Chairman Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.).

Clark offered to read the law specifically prohibiting the Department of Justice from overruling the decisions of the Parole Board.

"Well, you appoint the members of the board, don't you?" shot Hoffman.

That is true, Clark acknowledged, but he said he could not "fire" members of the board except on proof of grave dereliction of duty.

Clark said he had never discussed the paroles with anyone before they were granted.

He was asked specifically if that included Paul Dillon, former campaign manager for President Truman, and Maury Hughes, Dallas, Tex., who appeared before the Parole Board as a witness and attorney for the four. Dillon testified before a Chicago grand jury that he had received a $10,000 legal fee.

Never Discussed With Dillon

Clark testified he had never discussed the case with Dillon.

He said also that he had never discussed the case with Maury Hughes, Dallas, Tex., attorney, who described himself as a lifelong friend of the Attorney General. Hughes told the committee he was paid $15,000 to get a second indictment against the four—for mail fraud—dismissed in New York, an action Hughes said paved the way for the paroles.

Clark said that he had approved a recommendation from Boris Kostelanetz, (brother of the famous orchestra conductor) former special assistant in the Department of Justice, to drop the mail fraud indictment.

Kostelanetz Praised

Kostelanetz recommended dismissal of the mail fraud indictment, Clark said, as he was leaving the department to go into private practice. The recommendation was "purely routine," made in knowledge of the fact that a court would only impose a sentence to run concurrently with the one already being served, Clark stated. Kostelanetz was warmly praised both by Clark and the committee for his actions in regard to the case of the four hoodlums.

A recommendation drafted by Kostelanetz urging that no paroles be given three of the four because they were "vicious criminals who would stop at nothing to gain their ends" remained the official position of the Department of Justice, Clark declared.

Clark told the committee he had known Maury Hughes for 25 years. He said the Texas attorney had talked with Peyton Ford, an assistant attorney general, about the second indictment against the four men. Ford is scheduled to testify today.

Earlier Fred S. Rogers, 1028 Connecticut ave., a member of the Board of Parole, testified that Dillon had appeared twice before the board urging paroles for the four gangsters. He said no transcript or other record had been made of either appearance.

Dillon's plea was based, said Rogers, on the ground that the four were convicted on evidence of Bioff and Browne, who subsequently got off with lighter terms than they did. Rogers maintained the four were "incidental offenders."

Opposition Not Influential

Rogers said the Board of Parole based its decision on the record of the conduct of the men in prison and personal interviews with them. The opposition voiced by the Department of Justice and the judges on the case did not rule, Rogers acknowledged.

Rogers testified that the three-man board, aided by only two examiners, handled about 11,000 cases last year. Of these, Rogers said, he personally handled about one third.

"I can look at a prisoner's file, give him a few words of encouragement, and decide a case in one minute," Rogers told the committee.

He admitted that the board does not check to find out the character and reputations of persons urging parole for prisoners.

Clark told the committee the FBI has questioned 275 witnesses and has not been able to find any evidence of money being passed illegally, favors being done, or any wrong-doing.

Hoffman accused Clark of placing an "iron curtain" over his department and Clark in turn said that everything he gave "to this good committee of the Congress"—even confidential material—finds its way into the newspapers.

Tobey Opens Attack on McCabe Deals

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Blood plasma, donated to the armed services during the war, was sold by the Government and eventually went into the black market in China, the Senate Banking Committee was told yesterday.

The deal was one of several "bad" bargains made by the Foreign Liquidation Commission when Thomas B. McCabe, President Truman's choice for chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, was head of FLC in 1945 and 1946 the committee was told.

Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) presented a 28-page list of charges of bad business practices by FLC. He supported them with one witness, Hubert R. Moody, investigator for the Senate Surplus Property Committee.

McCabe plans to answer "some time next week" he said. Tobey said the charges were presented at this time "to clear the atmosphere." The committee, Tobey said, can determine from an investigation McCabe's fitness as a public servant and decide upon whether to recommend that his appointment to the reserve board be confirmed.

Tobin's charges are a revival of allegations made by the Senate War Investigating Committee in 1946.

Yesterday's testimony dealt mainly with sales of Government property in China, although Moody declared that similar conditions prevailed in other theaters.

Among the charges was one that McCabe had ordered the tails cut off 11 B-25 medium bombers that had previously been sold to a private Chinese firm as "salvage." The reason the bombers were cut up, Tobey said, was to "forestall bad publicity." He did not elaborate.

McCabe said he did not recall chopping up the airplanes. He further added that his liquidation set-up—with "1000 employes scattered all over the globe"—had done a good job.

"They conducted a fire sale around the world," he commented. "When a department store conducts a fire sale, it isn't difficult sometimes to find something wrong in the basement. But the over-all job was a good one."

The operations were badly conducted in China, Moody alleged. The officer in charge, he said, was Brig. Gen. Bernhard A. Johnson, a McCabe appointee. Moody was an investigator for the commission. When he attempted to report on Johnson's activities, Moody said, McCabe refused to listen to him.

Among the charges which Moody said McCabe declined to hear, were:

1. that Johnson was negotiating for jobs for himself and certain members of his staff with the Chinese government to resell the same property for the Chinese government.

2. That Maj. Lawrence E. Mullally was dismissed as attorney for the commission in China on Johnson's request. Mullally, Moody said, had objected to the sale of the American-donated blood plasma along with quantities of medical narcotics without agreements on price and without contracts.

3. That 150 airplanes, including military aircraft, were sold in direct violation of instructions from Washington as "salvage"—and that many of them were then flown off the field. The planes which Moody valued at $2,730,000 were sold for only $500,000, he charged.

McCabe Listens Calmly

4. That a contract at sell steel to American oil companies for $95,000 cash was cancelled, and the steel resold later to a Chinese concern for $57,000 credit. "A few days later this price was further reduced to less than $20,000, also on credit," Moody said.

5. That critical airplane parts were stamped "salvage' and $200,000 worth sold to Chinese officials for $7000.

Continued reports by Army officials and other Government agents brought no action from McCabe, Moody said. Later, when McCabe visited China, he added, McCabe refused to discuss the charges.

House to Agree if Senate Lowers Tax Cut to 5 Billions

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House advocates of a $6,500,000,000 tax reduction last night were ready to back down to a five-billion-dollar figure in conference if the Senate returns a bill of that size.

The plan to accept the Senate compromise, without substantial change, was reported part of the GOP high command's "veto-proof" strategy.

A leading House spokesman on tax policy predicted the House will take a five-billion-dollar bill because it is the "realistic" thing to do. Republicans thing they have the votes to override the White House on a bill of that size, but would almost certainly take a licking on a steeper cut.

The Senate Finance Committee, meanwhile, prepared to close hearings on a four-and-a-half to five-billion-dollar compromise next midweek. Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) predicted such a bill will be ready for Senate consideration by March 15.

The Senate Finance Committee meanwhile heard testimony from four Senate witnesses:

1. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) urged an excess profits tax on corporations to raise about five billion dollars a year. He said the effect would be to force prices down. He proposed every dollar of surplus be paid on the national debt, saying: "Until we get the national debt down to the level of national income we are playing with disaster."

2. Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) proposed return to the pre-1943 "earned income credit" to give wage earners relief.

3. Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) urged repeal of the Federal tax on oleomargarine.

4. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) asked that aliens who spend more than 90 days a year in the United States be required to pay the same taxes on their earnings as American citizens.

Republicans claimed the votes to turn back O'Mahoney's excess profits tax move. Chairman Millikin suggested the other proposals be considered in connection with a later general tax revision bill.

The Treasury meanwhile proposed 63 mostly technical, long-range tax changes to be taken up when Congress gets around to general tax revision. Treasury Undersecretary A. L. M. Wiggins said they would greatly improve the postwar tax structure by correcting inequities and removing uncertainties.

The individual income tax cut now being hurried through the Senate committee is expected to be modeled closely along the lines of the 6½-billion-dollar House Knutson bill cut. The 1½ billion dollars shaved off to make it "veto proof" are likely to be scaled from the 10 to 30 per cent percentage reductions voted by the House. Indications were the House-approved $100 increase in individual exemptions and split income privileges for husbands and wives would emerge nearly intact.

White House Republican tax-makers indicated acquiescence in a five-billion-dollar compromise goal.

'Church' Official Accused of Racket

Postal Fraud Charged in Puzzle Contest Promoted for Puritan 'Meeting House'

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Postal officials yesterday accused Harrison Parker of Chicago of using "The Puritan Church" in a quarter-million-dollar racket.

Parker won wide notice in the Supreme Court a few weeks ago when he argued his own appeal from two jail terms for contempt of court. But he will have Attorney Allen Bloch of Chicago at his table today, when he takes the stand to deny the mail fraud charges, before Trial Examiner Daniel J. Kelly.

Parker is charged with running a phony puzzle contest, using such name as "The Puritans," "The Puritan Church" and "The Chancellor, Puritan Church."

Office Over Drug Store

Postal Inspector V. V. Sugg testified yesterday that after the post-office got a big mailbag full of complaints—more than 700 of them—he began an investigation of the contests which took several months.

Sugg said he first went to see Parker, and found him in the offices of the Chancellor, Puritan Church, over a drug store in La Grange. There was a beauty shop on the floor above. In the offices, Sugg said, were about 20 girls—from 16 to 20 years old—working away opening envelopes and grading the puzzles that came in from people who read Parker's full page ads in "Screenland" and other magazines.

Fraud Attorney William C. O'Brien gave the trial examiner copies of the ads. They showed a crude map of the United States, with names of a few score towns and cities printed on it. You could win $250, the ad said, if you picked out and listed all the names that used certain letters, which were given. The prosecutors claim the puzzle is so easy anybody could work it.

Inspector Sugg said Parker gave him copies of the leaflets that went out to all who sent in answers to the puzzle.

Those who had the answer right got a letter from "Chancellor, Puritak Church." Here is how it began:

"Congratulations—I believe that YOU have listed the highest number of towns possible and YOU are right now in line to WIN the $250 first grand prize and the promptness prize of $50."

The letter went on to say the lucky winner now had a chance to get in on another big map puzzle contest. Of this one, the letter said:

"Best of all, YOU ARE SURE to get $2500 plus $1000 extra if you send in the best answer to the puzzle in accordance with the plan on the enclosed folder and are prompt. THAT's ALL YOU DO TO compete for both big prizes or $3500 in all—NOTHING ELSE COUNTS."

"Money Plan" Revealed

On the folder was another map, with more names of towns. And here was the big money plan:

Those who wanted to get in on the big prizes were asked to send in money to help build a big new Puritan meeting house in La Grange. If they sent $3 they were in line for a $1000 prize, if $6 for $1250, if $9 for $1750 and if $13 for $2500. And in each case there was $1000 extra for promptness.

Each person was sent, too, a piece of paper that looked like a check, made out in his name, good for $3500 if he sent in a gift and got the new puzzle right and was declared the winner.

Those who sent in the wrong answers got almost the same letter, except that it said it was too bad they did not win. But now they had a chance to get in on the big $3500 contest, by sending in money and so forth.

Inspector Sugg said he went to the Farmers State Bank in Montague, Mich., and found that about $6500 was there in the prize fund—just as Parker's folders said. He found, too, that there was another account that had $599.53 in it about the time the contest started.

During four months of the contest, deposits in this account came to $231,173.79. Parker had drawn out $166,603.36—leaving a balance on January 30, this year, of $63,970.90.

Sugg said Parker told him that newspaper and magazine ads for the contest cost about $90,000, and that other costs came to about $70,000.

The postal inspector said Parker claimed 2000 members for The Puritan Church, but that he spoke to half a dozen La Grange people and none of them ever heard of it, or knew anybody who belonged. Records of the church showed that Parker has been listed as secretary and Ecumenical Patriarch as well as chancellor. The two trustees of the church who had the right to draw checks against the prize fund turned out to be Parker's sister—Mrs. Viggo Byrd—and his wife—Mrs. Edith Parker.

Inherited "Church" Office

Parker declared—Sugg told the examiner—that he rose to chancellor in 1939, when his older sister died. For generations, he explained, the elder member of the Parker family has been chancellor of the Puritan Church.

Parker denies all the charges of fraud and claims the contest was on the level in every way. He told The Washington Post whatever he did in the affair he did as the servant of his church, and he said he was ashamed to see our Government trying to strike at the church by bringing charges against him.

All day, Parker kept notes of what went on and helped out Attorney Bloch by writing him notes. During the day he used up a whole pad of note paper.

State Accused Of Balking Militia

Baltimore, March 3 (AP).—Organization of a National Guard company in Calvert County has been handicapped by lack of cooperation from the State Military Department, State Senator Goldstein complained today.

The charge, which brought immediate objection from Senator Stromberg of Howard County, was made during a Legislative Council discussion of a proposed armory loan bill. The measure would provide a $560,000 bond issue for construction of armories in Maryland.

Senator Goldstein objected to any change in a current law which makes it mandatory for the State Military Department to build armories first in four counties which do not have any—Calvert, Garrett, St. Marys and Howard. The measure now under discussion would have eliminated any priority in construction of armories.

Manassas Votes Entry In Va. Planning Group

Manassas, Va., March 3 (AP).—The town council of Manassas has voted to join in forming the northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission, Mayor Harry P. Davis said today.

Represented in the regional commission will be the counties of Prince William, Fairfax and Arlington, as well as the city of Alexandria and towns in the region that have planning commissions.

The three Manassas representatives on the commission are G. Wallace Hook, C. Lacey Compton and Warren C. Coleman, Davis announced.

U. S. Reenters Market With Big Flour Bid

The Government reentered the grain market yesterday for the first time since the abrupt break in prices February 4—just a month ago—with an offer to buy flour equal to 9,300,000 bushels of wheat.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson called a special news conference to announce the action—an unusual procedure. His reason, he told newsmen, was to express publicly the hope that the Government's offer to buy would not cause a sharp upturn in prices today.

Earlier this week, when the Government asked for bids for flour equal to less than 400,000 bushels of wheat—about one twentieth as much as it is seeking today— the market soared wildly.

The department also plans to buy 8,600,000 bushels of whole wheat soon to complete its grain export program for April.

Allocations for exports in April, announced by Anderson yesterday, total 864,500 long tons, or 30,517,000 bushels of grain. The allocations include: wheat, 18,329,000 bushels; flour equivalent to 12,188,000 bushels of wheat; rye 440,000 bushels, and grain sorghums, 1,440,000 bushels.

Anderson would not say when wheat buying would begin. He indicated this might depend upon how the grain markets reacted to the offer to buy flour.

Anderson's announcement was not made until 4 o'clock—long after the markets had closed for the day. During the day's trading, wheat had sold from 2 to 3½ cents a bushel, based on Anderson's prediction of Tuesday night that wheat might slump below the Government price support level (about $2.08 a bushel in Chicago) if the law requiring a carryover on July 1 of 150 million bushels is not repealed.

Folsom Calls Suit 'Politics'

of a Hanceville, Ala., farmer. Described as an attractive redhead, she formerly was employed in a Birmingham hotel.

She declared in her petition that Folsom and she had lived as man and wife in Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky and Florida, and that Folsom had introduced her to his mother and others as the "next first lady of Alabama."

Mrs. Johnson asserted the child was born in Nashville, Tenn., April 17, 1946, shortly before Folsom won the nomination as Governor. She said the baby was taken to Michigan until the Democratic primaries were over in Alabama.

She added that Folsom telephoned her about his victory in the Democratic primary and arranged for her and James Douglas to meet him in Florida.

Later, she asserted, Folsom had "a change of heart" and disclaimed that she was his wife and that James was his son.

Lana Denies She Was Involved With John Talbot

Hollywood, March 3 (U.P.).—Lana Turner said today she never was involved with John Alden Talbot, wealthy Palm Beachite, whose Washington wife named her in a maintenance suit.

"I have dinner with a fellow a couple of times and I'm a homebreaker," Miss Turner complained. "Great big lecherous Lana, that's me.

"My attorneys got hold of hers and I'm not in that suit anymore. That was the end. The only reason I was in there in the first place was that I was the only girl he knew whose name meant anything to the public."

Gen. Tire Head Predicts Price Rise

Akron, Ohio, March 3 (AP).—A cut in tire demand may require higher prices in the near future, President W. O'Neil of General Tire & Rubber Co. said today.

O'Neil told stockholders in the company's annual report that "a cut in tire demand, with the ensuing increase in overhead, will require higher prices in tires in the near future unless the other factors can be reduced in cost."

The company reported consolidated net income of $5,872,472 for 1947, compared with $5,734,955 for the previous year.

Net sales hit a record high of $126,136,242, an increase of 19.1 per cent above the previous high mark in 1946.

Conversions at Brisk Pace, A. T. & T. Reports

New York, March 3 (AP).—The American Telephone Co. said today nearly 10 per cent of its 2¾ per cent convertible debentures of 1957 have been converted into shares of the company's capital stock in the past two days. The conversion feature became effective March 1.

The issue totals $357,532,600 and may be converted at $140 a share. Conversion may be made at one $100 debenture plus $40 in cash for each share of stock to be issued in conversion.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 3 (AP).—A few cents were knocked off the value of wheat, while corn and oats showed little change today. Dealings on the Board of Trade were moderately active and prices swung over a fairly wide range.

Wheat declined on a statement by Agriculture Secretary Anderson that prices of this bread cereal might decline below the Government loan level. The loan rate at Chicago is $2.08 a bushel. Small supplies and a steady demand in the spot market helped feed grains.

At the close wheat was 2 to 3¼ cents lower, May 2.42¼@2.43; corn was 1½ lower to 1 cent higher, May 2.26½@2.27; oats were ⅝ lower to ⅝ higher, May 1.14⅛@1.14⅜, and soybeans were 1 to 1½ higher, March 3.69.

Secretary Anderson's statement was made in a letter to Senator Young (R., N. D.). He said the price slump was likely "in the face of favorable prospects" if the law requiring a carryover on July 1 of 150,000,000 bushels is not revealed.

The Government remained out of the cash wheat market and the Northwestern Miller, a trade publication, said flour business in the past week was the lightest in years.

New York Cotton

New York, March 3 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 50 cents to $1.15 a bale lower today. Prices fluctuated over a fairly wide range, with the market hesitant, pending outcome of the foreign aid programs in Congress. Commission house liquidation and hedging depressed the market as much as $1.40 a bale in early dealings. Later a rally developed on mill buying and short covering, but after the market reached gains of almost $1 a bale it encountered increased liquidation.

Settling Strikes

Congressman Clare Hoffman seems to take a more disparaging view of the Taft-Hartley Act than even its worst enemies and severest critics. In his opinion, apparently, the law, so far from promoting industrial peace, forbids anyone to settle a strike. He has accused President Truman of "evading" the law because the President sought some means of bringing to an end the bitter strife which has interrupted and impaired service in the cafeterias of Federal agencies.

Special Federal Negotiator George E. Strong is quite right, of course, in saying that "as I read the Taft-Hartley Act, there is nothing in it which prevents or even discourages the parties to a labor dispute from settling it by private negotiation or by utilizing a third party acceptable to both." Settlement is plainly in the public interest. In the GSI strike, settlement was initially made impossible by management's refusal to negotiate. Currently, however, it appears to be the union which is assuming an intransigent position.

A thoroughly reasonable proposal advanced by the special negotiator and accepted by GSI was turned down by the cafeteria workers—as though they desired to continue the strike for the sheer sake of agitation. Mr. Hoffman to the contrary notwithstanding, we hope that peace can be restored for the sake of the Federal employes who are the cafeterias' patrons.

Press Privilege

The news editor and a staff reporter of The Newburgh News in Newburgh, N. Y., went to jail last week because they refused to tell a grand jury the source of certain information they had published in connection with a crime under investigation. Whatever the legal validity of this punishment, it represents an anomaly in American life. For most Americans, we have no doubt, feel strongly that reporters, like physicians, priests and lawyers, have a moral obligation to protect persons who talk to them in confidence. A newspaperman who betrayed confidences, even at the behest of a court, would undercut the basis of his livelihood and would forfeit the respect of colleagues and public alike. Thus, if the judge who sentenced the two men for contempt of court was right in ruling that the law confers no such immunity on members of the press, the law is at variance with morals and with settled American concepts of fair play.

We should think, however, that even in the absence of any statutory definition of a news source as privileged, the first amendment to the Constitution would give newsmen the right to respect confidences—and that this right has, in point of fact, grown up as a part of the common law. Lack of it would constitute a serious handicap to publication of news and consequently a real impairment of the freedom of the press. But whether the remedy lies properly in the courts or in the legislatures, it is a remedy which should be provided without delay on grounds of the public interest entailed.

UMT's Cost

If Congress is to vote on universal military training this session, it is plain that someone will have to light a fire under the House Rules Committee and its obstructionist chairman, Representative Leo E. Allen. This legislative hotfoot is a job for the Republican leadership. In the Senate, where the approach has been more reasonable, Secretary Forrestal has at last submitted the cost estimates for which Senator Gurney and the Armed Services Committee have been waiting. Now there can be no excuse for further delay in at least bringing UMT bills to the floor for consideration by the entire membership of both houses of Congress.

No small sum is involved in Secretary Forrestal's figures. The outlay for next year would be approximately half a billion dollars, then two billion dollars for each of the following two years, and after that three billions annually. These are the sums deemed necessary to get the program rolling over a 33-month period and to intensify reserve training. These outlays would be a substantial addition to the already heavy defense burden, and they would purchase no fighting equipment. They must be weighed strictly on the basis of what UMT would do for the national security, how that security would fare without it, and to what extent it would strengthen Secretary Marshall's hand.

The trouble now is that the international situation is putting the whole issue in a new framework. Since Prague the question has arisen as to whether Selective Service and home guard training are not required. In any event, Secretary Marshall seems to need a gesture to give him boldness in a world where American influence is deteriorating and Moscow is being encouraged as a result of the lack of such boldness.

Turning On The Light

No. X.

Congressional inquiries should be dedicated to enlightenment and not to persecution

The hottest issue in the broad controversy over congressional investigations is whether the contempt power of Congress should be used to punish those who refuse to answer questions touching their personal beliefs and affiliations. Our previous assumption that the Supreme Court would be extremely reluctant to restrain this power has been strengthened by its refusal to hear the Josephson case. Leon Josephson was sentenced in a lower court to a year in jail and a $1000 fine for contempt before the Committee on Un-American Activities. If abuse of the contempt power is to be restrained, probably Congress itself will have to act. We hope that it will do so. Essential as this power is to the investigative arms of our law-making body, we do not think it should continue to be exercised without restraint.

The investigative power, as we have tried to emphasize in this series of editorials, is the power of turning on the light. It is legitimately used to inform Congress and the public of any state of affairs that has a vital bearing upon national policy. But it is not properly used to punish individuals for any belief they may hold, however unorthodox, heretical or potentially treasonable. We cannot suppress the feeling that, in the recent Hollywood probe, Congress permitted its contempt power to be used to hale individuals before the courts because of hatred of the beliefs they were accused of holding. This is a grave departure from the democratic way. It has the appearance of throwing men into jail because of what they think. In our opinion, Congress has a duty to itself to lift its activities to a higher plane.

As a practical matter, contempt proceedings against the ten alleged Communists from Hollywood might have been avoided by more adroit handling of the case. The Committee on Un-American Activities introduced into evidence cards indicating that the stubborn witnesses were members of the Communist Party. Their refusal to testify as to their affiliations with communism seemed to clinch the assumption that the cards were authentic. If the committee's purpose was to identify the followers of Moscow for the enlightenment of Congress and the public, its purpose was then served. To go beyond this and hound the exposed individuals into jail serves only to make martyrs of them, to divide the American people and bring our own regard for civil liberties into grave question.

In our opinion, Congress ought not to use its contempt power in this arbitrary manner. Judicious and tolerant restraint of power is the essence of democracy, and Congress ought to be no less amenable to it than the courts. When it comes to the actual drafting of a rule to prevent abuse of this power, however, the task is admittedly difficult. We think a proper start could be made by amending the existing law so as to provide that no witness before an investigating committee should be cited for contempt for refusal to answer questions as to his religious or political beliefs. To be sure, this would not go very far. It would leave the committee authority to imprison witnesses for refusal to testify as to their conduct, such as the joining of a party or a subversive organization. But it would doubtless have a constructive psychological effect on reckless investigators and would reassure those citizens who now fear that there are no limits to impingement of the investigative power upon individual rights.

We do not think that Congress will ever agree to foreclose inquiry into political affiliations. Nor do we think it should. "One need only recall the activities of the so-called fifth columns in various countries both before and during the late war," as Judges Swan and Chase of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals pointed out in the Josephson case, "to realize that the United States should be alert to discover and deal with the seeds of revolution within itself." The power to expose subversives, whether Communist, Fascist or any other variety, must be ever at hand. But Congress ought to use it sparingly. If the national safety requires that subversives be incarcerated, let it be by legislation. Certainly the power to imprison witnesses for contempt should not be used, when other equally effective methods of enlightening the public are at hand.

Helpless Finland

Finland's helplessness makes the Soviet insistence upon a military alliance with Finland a tragic joke. Under the peace treaty the thousand-mile frontier with Russia was so rearranged that Finland could neither attack Russia nor defend herself from Russia. In the south, Karelia, the traditional gateway, is now Russian; in the center, the Finnish waistline was so narrowed as to make it easy for Russia to cut the country in two; in the north, the Russians made adjustments allowing of swift control. In addition the Gulf of Finland was Russified, and the capital at Helsinki was put within Russian cannon's reach by acquisition of a military base at Porkkala. Yet the Russians insist on new military guarantees. The reason lies in the Stalinist fear-struck phobia militarily to consolidate the territory behind the iron curtain and to bludgeon oppositionists into compliance or silence.

It is sad to see all independence in process of extinguishment in a country which raised itself after its liberation, consequent upon the first World War, into an ideal commonwealth. In 1939, when Russia fell upon Finland, the decline started, for Finland suffered great losses in manpower and resources. The decline was accelerated by the fresh travail incurred when Finland was dragged into a new war with Russia after the German assault upon Russia. Since the peace the Finns, perhaps the hardest working people in the world, have been trying to pay the reparation bill imposed by Moscow. They were resigned to the task, and the Soviet Union, so far as can be discovered, had nothing to complain about. But the Soviet seemingly cannot afford even the possibility of a tug-of-war behind the iron curtain. Even the nominal independence left to Finland is something that cannot be tolerated. As one country after another is ground under the Slav heel, the lesson for the free world is clear. It is to unite before it is too late. The Kremlin will not be satisfied as long as there is any liberty left anywhere.

Lost Leadership

The stalemate over Palestine is further emphasized by the objections by Britain and the Soviet to the so-called plan of settlement that Mr. Austin submitted to the Security Council. It was, of course, not a plan. It was the rejection of a plan and the substitution of a hope—a hope that, granted a little prompting by the Big Five, Palestine would settle itself peacefully. The hope is vanishing rapidly into the mists of yesterday and the day before. Even the prompters won't play. "Nonsense" was the ejaculation in London when that part of the Austin "plan" was unfolded which called for talking the Jews and the Arabs into agreement on partition. Now the British refuse even to take part in a Big Five parley to see whether a threat to the peace could be established over Palestine. Soviet Russia ladled out some more cold water over Mr. Austin. It rejects participation in any plan to persuade Arab acceptance of partition.

Meantime, as the Security Council treads water at Lake Success, the inflammation grows in Palestine, with both Jews and Arabs engaged in putting themselves in position for May 15, when the British finally quit. Partition is a fact. The Jews won't compromise any further, and are beginning to set up a Jewish state "under the United Nations." No doubt the Palestinian Arabs under the Mufti are preparing to battle it out. The problem, which last November the French delegate at the General Assembly called "most particularly urgent," is thus developing a hard core which is insoluble in the Austin framework. It has never been soluble other than by a prompt and resolute stand. This was more important than the terms, for there is no ideal solution in Palestine, and the legalities are lost in antiquity. The United States, in marching up the hill and down again, in indulging in the sort of "prattling feebleness" against which Theodore Roosevelt warned foreign policy makers, is left without a friend for its new position, and has jeopardized its leadership in world affairs.

Rash Optimism

Some of the optimism recently expressed by Secretary Anderson about the improvement in world food supplies seems to be contradicted by a report from his own department. The March 1 issue of Foreign Crops and Markets discloses that as of the first of the year total grain supplies on hand in the four principal exporting nations were the lowest in recent years—123 million short tons, as compared with 134 million a year ago. Moreover, these figures include the augmented crops just harvested in Argentina and Australia, without which the situation would be much worse. In other words, the recent improvement in grain supplies elsewhere is more than outweighed by the shorter crops in the United States and Canada.

What these figures emphasize is the imperative need for continued caution in use of grain. To be sure, as far as current conditions can be relied upon as an index, the prospect is for material relief in the world food shortage during the latter half of 1948. But the situation is still touch and go up to June 30. Were it not for Russian grain exports, for example, several European countries would now be in a desperate plight. But Russian exports are at best imponderables which cannot be counted upon. Moreover, a relatively small amount of grain can make a lot of difference when it comes to the question of holding the line or cutting bread rations—a problem European nations still may have to decide.

Thus a great deal still depends on American exports through the balance of the crop year—and any amount of wheat we can ship abrpad over and above the 450 million bushel minimum goal we have set may have a tremendous influence on European stability. Our emphasis still must be on grain conservation. If false optimism should lead to a squandering of grain that in turn prevented us from making it possible for Europe to bridge the gap, then we certainly should have nothing to be exuberant about.

LOST

"Lost" had a terrible, final sound
When one was four,
Asking, "Will I ever be found,
And home, once more?"

"Lost" today is a wider word—
Ominous, vast.
Echoes that forty years have heard
Prison me, fast.

Lost in a world more intricate
Than mocked a child,
Puzzled, I cry, and grope, and wait,
Unreconciled.

Home-Rule Defects

Proponents of the Auchincloss home-rule bill for the District claim that those who oppose this bill do not have faith in democracy. At the same time they accuse the opponents of being reactionary. Such tactics do not conform to the democratic ideals they preach.

I cannot speak for all opponents of the bill, but my conclusions based upon observation, discussion with representative groups, residence first as a Government employe from a Midwestern State, then as a property-owner, are as follows:

1. Government employes, even of long residence here, are not especially interested in the District government. Many I questioned did not know what the home-rule bill was about, and even with dual voting, many feared it might reflect unfavorably on their voting rights back home.

2. In view of the usual difficulty of getting out of the vote when the voter votes but once in his own community, it will be doubly difficult to get him to vote twice—at home and here. Such disinterest on the part of a large segment of the electorate is conducive to corruption in local politics, as shown in other cities.

3. The District presents a unique problem because of its small size. We cannot therefore compare the probable effects of home rule to that of any other city in the country. Here, as nowhere else, those who as natives want full suffrage have only to move a few miles to Virginia or Maryland to obtain their voting privileges. They can and would do likewise if local taxes became too high, or if they found it to be advantageous for any other reason. Anywhere the population goes, business goes. Already more homes are being built outside than inside the District. Home rule if unsatisfactory might hasten the exodus.

4. Democracy could only work here to advantage with participation by the majority of District residents. A referendum on the bill would be the democratic way to determine the degree of interest and possible participation.

5. Representative John E. Rankin of Mississippi recently offered a suggestion that I think merits serious consideration. It is that the District, except for Federal buildings and grounds, be ceded back to the State of Maryland. It appears on the face of it to be the natural solution of this knotty problem.

Divide And Conquer

This writer is Southern born and raised, but not an iron-bound adherent of any political party. I sympathize in spirit with the stand taken by Southern Democrats, who doubtless feel that they have too long been "sold down the river" beforehand in every national campaign. Nevertheless, while this country is at the cross-roads of destiny, I want to earnestly warn everyone concerned, both North and South, that this is no time to allow domestic issue of any kind to split the country up into opposing factions.

And, in regard to the rift between the President and Southern Democrats, who knows but that it was skillfully engineered by Communist agents for the express purpose of weakening the President's hand in dealing with international problems—and especially with the threat of Communism?

"Divide and Conquer" was a favorite slogan of Hitler's and the Communists are much too astute to overlook so effective a weapon. If they can get the whole country at cross purposes, like a vehicle with one wheel pulling north, another south, another east, and the other west, it will be easier for them to weld their shackles on us.

Therefore it is suicidal for us to fall into the snares they are laying for us. Every race, group or faction, everyone who has any real love for America in his or her make-up, should discard personal differences for the time being and unite in a common fight against Communism. Otherwise our children and children's children will pay the price if we don't. Whoever is bitten by a rattlesnake doesn't spend any time worrying over a mosquito bite.

"Wallace-Taylor"

In your February 27 editorial dealing with the vice presidential candidacy of Senator Taylor, you say this: "Not that Senator Taylor is any Communist. But there can be no question about the Communist support which he frankly welcomes—support which on the matter of foreign policy can mean only that Senator Taylor is serving Communist purposes."

This type of "logic" is beneath the editorial standards of The Washington Post. Sure, the Communists favored retaining price controls and rationing. So did Senator Taylor, I believe, and so did I. But it is not only illogical to declare such support to be serving Communist purposes—to do so smacks of the name-calling and smear technique so dangerously prevalent today. If you don't like something, if you disagree with someone, don't argue the issue on its merits—just label it "Communist" or if that seems a little strong—just label it "serving Communist purposes."

Senator Taylor's position on foreign policy is, I am sure, dictated by his conviction that it is in the best interests of the United States.

Palestine Land

Your February 27 correspondent, R. H., refers to Palestine as belonging to the Arabs. On what basis? It has never been an Arab country. Before 1918, Palestine was a province of the Turkish Empire; before the Turks, of the Byzantine Empire; before that, of the Roman Empire; before the Romans, Palestine belonged to the Jews.

As for the land—that is, the real estate as distinguished from the country—not a single square foot of it was taken by the Jews from anyone. It was bought from Arabs, who were very glad to sell it. At high prices—not like the acquisition of American land from the Indians for trinkets and rum.

All the land in Palestine would have been acquired peacefully and legally by individual Jews long ago if not for two things: the Arab chiefs, alarmed at the coming of civilization into their feudal domains, got the British to pass laws forbidding individual Arabs to sell their own real estate to Jews. And the success of the Jews in making a prosperous country out of what had lain as desert waste for centuries under the Turks acted as a magnet to draw Arabs into the country.

Subversive Textbooks

I wonder if the citizens of our city fully appreciate the splendid piece of work Representative A. L. Miller of Nebraska has done for us in having drawn up and presented House Concurrent resolution 132?

It is a bill to protect our boys and girls from subversive textbooks in our public schools, and to inculcate in them love for their country, and better understanding of and respect for their Constitution and Bill of Rights.

If our citizens, and especially parents, have not read the resolution, it would be well for them to get a copy through Dr. Miller's office, read it, and pass it on to others.

Anglo-Guatemalan Dispute

In the last paragraph of an article in the New York Times of February 27 on the British territorial dispute with Guatemala, it is stated that "Britain has proposed submission of the dispute to the International Court of Justice at The Hague, but Guatemala has refused."

It must be remembered that Guatemala has proposed the recourse to arbitration since 1880, and that the British Foreign Office then replied that it "cannot admit that there exists any basis to submit the question to arbitration."

In 1937 Britain recognized that basis, but did not accept the President of the United States whom Guatemala had proposed as arbitrator. In 1940, Great Britain accepted arbitration by President Roosevelt, but wanted judgment to deal exclusively on whether "there still exists some practical method through which the original obligations established in Article VII of the Treaty of 1859 could be realized in an effective way," and in case such method should not exist "up to where and to what extent is the government of His Majesty responsible for the nonfulfillment of the mutual obligations according to Article VII."

On the other hand, the English government pretended that Guatemala compromised—as a condition to the proposal—to demark the frontier - "immediately after the court should have pronounced its final award." In that form, and through that compromise, the English government expected that Guatemala supplied the title to the territory of Belize which Britain had lost by virtue of the declaration of caducity of the Treaty of April 30, 1859.

Guatemala's obligation in accordance with the 1859 treaty was the cession of more than 22,000 square miles of Belize. Guatemala ceded the territory: in compensation Great Britain was to (Article VII of the treaty) construct a highway from the capital of the republic to the Atlantic coast. England did not provide the funds or supply the technical personnel, and therefore the road was not built.

Guatemala, during more than 80 years, has striven to make Britain comply with its obligations. As the British government continually refused to comply, and because of the nonrecognition of Guatemala's rights, Guatemala has declared that the convention has lapsed.

Consequently, everything has returned to the former status quo prior to 1859, and Great Britain again lacks a title to her permanency in British Honduras.

Guatemala has always postulated an absolute arbitration to the whole controversy, without any kind of restrictions, by an authorized court.

It must be remembered that in the middle of the year of 1940, Guatemala decided to stop all diplomatic discussions of the controversy for the duration of the war, because Great Britain was involved in a gigantic battle.

This gesture proves that Guatemala does not have to have recourse to "irresponsible elements" because she is absolutely confident in the justice of her claim. Nevertheless, Guatemala by no means relinquished her claims. The British should have remembered this noble Guatemalan gesture and should have abstained from sending three cruisers to Guatemalan waters. Guatemala has strongly protested against this unnecessary act.

Social Milestone

By Malvina Lindsay

Unwed Mothers' Status

SEVERAL EVENTS indicate society is marking another milestone in its slowly enlightening attitude toward unwed mothers and illegitimate children.

One is the inclusion of unmarried women in the maternity leave benefits that Senator William Langer's bill would grant to Federal workers. Another is the movement in this country toward antishame legislation that would remove references to illegitimacy from birth certificates. Still another is the new concern of today's social workers with the problems of unmarried fathers.

It is easy to imagine the amazement of Hester Prynne of The Scarlet Letter to these happenings. In fact "unfortunate" girls of even a few decades ago might find incredible the support physicians and social welfare authorities gave at the hearing on the Langer bill to the inclusion of unmarried mothers in maternity benefits.

This provision of course has stirred up some dispute. Some legislators and executives fear it would encourage illegitimate child bearing by Government employes who come from environments of lax moral standards. Also the traditional feeling that society should be stern with the moral transgressor—especially if a woman, and especially if she gets caught—still has a strong grip.

HOWEVER, as social workers point out, the child is the chief concern of society, and the unmarried mother has far greater financial difficulty than the married one in giving a baby the right start in life. The unmarried mother must also as a rule support her child unaided.

A precedent for not limiting maternity benefits was set by the International Labor Organization in 1919 when it adopted as its third convention the advocacy of maternity leave with pay for "all" women workers in industry and commerce.

The increase in illegitimacy in recent years, both in this country and Europe, makes the social problem of the child born out of wedlock more compelling. Around 100,000 illegitimate babies are being born annually in the United States. War's upsets have had much to do with this. Britain reports 1 birth in 10 illegitimate. On the European continent the rate is generally higher. In countries that lost heavily in manpower, as Germany, the number of women left with children to rear is so great that the line of distinction between married and unmarried "widows" often becomes faint.

The International Council of Women has called for world agreements to safeguard the interests of the vast number of illegitimate children throughout the world. In this country there is growing realization that society in its zeal to punish the mother has denied the child a fair chance in life.

CHIEF progress in viewpoint has taken place in two fields, legislation and social work. Nine States now issue birth certificates that do not stigmatize a child as illegitimate. The National Association of Women Lawyers is trying to get such legislation extended. The United States Children's Bureau is urging communities to give more aid to unmarried mothers and has suggested a program of action.

Both the bureau and social workers generally are urging a more understanding approach to the unmarried father. From ignoring his guilt, as in early days, the tendency developed to regard him as proper subject for shotgun discipline. Now however instead of being made to feel like a criminal his voluntary cooperation is sought in solving the problem the best way for all concerned. Some authorities on the problem of illegitimacy are advocating special training of men social workers to serve as counselors for unmarried fathers.

But human attitudes toward breakers of moral convention have lagged behind legislative and sociological progress. In many communities the nameless child and the unwed mother are still pariahs. While such deep-seated feeling is not likely to change quickly, yet the path of modern Hester Prynnes and their Pearls—even those of Arthur Dimmesdales — will be made easier by the economic opportunity and psychological understanding now coming their way.

What Is Interference?

Andre Visson in his article, "Rape of Czechoslovakia," in your February 29 issue, makes the following statement: "One may wonder why our Ambassador, Lawrence A. Steinhardt, who left Washington for Prague a few days before the Communist coup, did not encourage President Benes and the anti-Communist Czech leaders to put up stronger resistance to the intimidation of the Communist Premier, Clement Gottwald."

But, according to international law, public ministers are forbidden to interfere by act or deed with the internal affairs of the government to which they are accredited. One wonders where is the dividing line, if any exists, between (a) encouragement to resist and (b) actual interference.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

III. Truman As Roosevelt Successor

Lippmann

THE CHARACTER of the Truman Administration has been determined by the peculiar circumstances in which it originated.

The Democratic Party is in power because in 1944, at the climax of the war President Roosevelt was felt to be indispensable as Commander in Chief. Mr. Truman is President because Mr. Wallace was regarded as a liability in a campaign for a fourth term,—as a candidate who would hold no voters that Roosevelt would not hold and would alienate many whom Roosevelt could otherwise attract.

The rhyme and reason of the fourth term was that President Roosevelt was indispensable in his role of Commander in Chief and peacemaker. The Democratic managers believed that Mr. Roosevelt could not be replaced. They did not feel called upon to decide whether their own candidate for Vice President was qualified to replace him. The calculations and maneuvers which brought Mr. Truman forward ahead not only of Mr. Wallace but of Mr. Byrnes and Justice Douglas had nothing whatever to do with the paramount and the unique issue of the campaign—which was that the war should be concluded by the men who were conducting it victoriously.

THE UNTIMELY death of Roosevelt meant, therefore, that the Democratic Party was quite unprepared to carry out the one and only promise on which it had been given a fourth term of power. After one unhappy and uncomfortable attempt at the Potsdam Conference in July 1945 to do what Roosevelt had been reelected to do, Mr. Truman gave up the effort to be his replacement. He gave up the steering wheel and settled down to do the rest of his driving from the back seat.

Then the very thing happened which a majority of the people in 1944 had wanted not to have happen. The continuity of the conduct of the unfinished war and its aftermath was broken. In spite of Roosevelt's death some continuity might have been maintained had Mr. Truman not allowed virtually the whole team of Roosevelt's principal military and political advisers to be disbanded. But from 1945 until 1947 the great affairs of the settlement were in the charge of men who, with the exception of Admiral Leahy, had played no continuing part in, and had no first-hand knowledge of, the high strategy of the war. It was not until Marshall, Lovett, Douglas, McCloy were recalled to Washington that the broken threads have begun in some measure, and with great difficulty, to be repaired.

THE INSTINCT of the people in 1944 was sound. All historical experience shows that the making of peace is a continuation of the conduct of war, and that the problems of a peace settlement are unintelligible to men who do not have a complete understanding of the war that is to be settled.

Unfortunately in England the same rupture occurred. Men who had served usefully in the war, but had not conducted it, were suddenly and unexpectedly charged with the task of settling it. So the Anglo-American peacemakers have had to learn by making their own mistakes—an expensive process in view of the fact that they were dealing with the Russians.

UNABLE to carry out the mandate which had been given to Roosevelt alone, Mr. Truman was not sure what his mandate was. If he could not replace Roosevelt the Commander in Chief, ought he to replace him as leader of the New Deal? It was a difficult question which has troubled Mr. Truman since he entered the White House. On the one hand, it was evident that in 1944 Roosevelt was not elected as a New Dealer. That had been recognized by removing Henry Wallace, and it was clear, as the 1946 elections showed, that there was an anti-New Deal reaction in the country.

On the other hand, what was to be the role of Roosevelt's successor and political heir if he was neither a New Dealer nor a Commander in Chief? Mr. Truman's solution of this conundrum has been to get rid of the New Dealers, and to be what he in fact really is—no New Dealer at all—but a politician who appreciates the voting strength of the Roosevelt combination. He has tried to do what he thought he had to do, and to promise what it seemed expedient to promise, in order to hold together the various groups and interests which Roosevelt had managed to amalgamate. His task has been to tie together a Truman Administration, which has no popular mandate of its own, out of the Roosevelt components.

IT HAS NOT been easy. If it is possible to achieve the synthesis it will not be because of the magnetic attraction of the Truman Administration but only because the Republicans make it impossible for the many independent and uncommitted voters, who want a change, to change to them.

Off The Record

By Ed Reed

"That won't unlock anything, will it, Mr. Mayor?"

larly noteworthy, in that it departed from the usual practice.

It seemed that Hoover felt it necessary to add a flat conclusion, lest a different inference be drawn from the preceding passage in his letter.

Thomas issued his statement from Walter Reed Hospital, where he is recovering from an illness. He said that "there has been some misleading information given out that the letter clears Condon of any disloyal activity."

Referring to the contacts with the alleged spy, Thomas said:

"A further check discloses that while Hoover did say there was no evidence that Condon had been disloyal in associating with this one individual, the tenor of the rest of the 3½ pages is entirely different. Its tone is certainly critical of Condon and his activities.

"Now I want the whole world to see that letter. The American people are entitled to the full facts of this matter."

Demands Its Publication

He called on the Commerce Department to make it public.

A department spokesman, however, said that so far the department considered the letter confidential, as was everything else in Condon's—or in anyone's—loyalty file.

Referring to the subpena, he said the department "wants to cooperate with the Thomas Committee, but has to give due attention to national security and to the confidential nature of the documents in our possession."

The principal concern, it appeared, was what would be the affect on future loyalty investigations throughout the Government if the contents of the examinations were not held in complete confidence.

The department believes it has ample legal basis if it refuses to send the file to Thomas.

Jackson Ruling Cited

In particular, there is a 1941 ruling of the then Attorney General, Robert H. Jackson, that "all investigative reports are confidential documents of the Executive Department and that congressional or public access thereto would not be in the public interest."

Jackson supported his decision with a long series of precedents on the position taken by Presidents since Washington's time.

Atomic scientists rallied yesterday to Condon's defense. Statements praising his ability and loyalty were issued here by the Federation of Atomic Scientists and by its Washington chapter, and in Chicago by the American Committee of Atomic Scientists, headed by Dr. Albert Einstein.

In addition, there were several telegrams to Secretary Harriman urging him to support his bureau chief.

The statement from the Einstein atomic group accused the Thomas committee of rendering "a disservice to the interests of the United States." It said such attacks would make it more difficult for the Government to obtain the services of able scientists.

Urey Agrees with Condon

Nobel Prize Winner Harold C. Urey, who joined with Einstein in the statement, said that Condon himself "stated it pretty well; I agree that if he is the weakest link, then our country is quite safe."

Another signer, Professor Henry D. Smyth, author of the official Smyth report on the atomic bomb, said he had known Condon for 25 years and believed him to be "completely loyal to the United States."

Coach Klan Fought Will Stay Fired

Ringgold, Ga., March 3 (AP).—The county board of education voted unanimously to uphold the suspension of Lakeview High School Coach Walter Bowland, board Chairman George McClure said today.

The coach has said he was fired because "I am in opposition to the Ku Klux Klan."

"I guess that means he is fired," McClure said. "There are plenty of grounds for the board's action yesterday. He was given an opportunity to appear before the board, but he was not there, nor did he send anyone to represent him. As far as we are concerned the matter is closed."

The coach is now at the home of his parents in Paducah, Ky.

Coach Bowland said threats against him were inspired originally by a fight in the gymnasium between himself and a former student.

Later, a cross was burned in front of the coach's home.

Negroes Shun Polls After Klan Parade

Wrightsville, Ga., March 3 (AP).—Only one Negro approached the polls here today and he didn't vote after the Ku Klux Klan staged a night parade around the county courthouse, followed by speechmaking.

City Judge W. C. Brinson said hehe didn't believe the Klan affair had anything to do with the absence of the city's 241 qualified Negro voters from the polls during the Johnson County Democratic primary.

"The Negroes," said Brinson, "are just not interested in county affairs." Four-hundred were registered, but there were no reports or any voting.

Brinson, who is also chairman of the county Democratic Executive Committee, said the Negro who approached the polls asked if he was registered.

He was told his name was on the books as a voter, said Brinson, but he made no attempt to vote.

Last night 300 Klansmen and Klanswomen heard the grand dragon of Georgia, Dr. Samuel Green, declare that if President Truman's civil rights program was passed, the time would come when Federal bayonets would again be called to enforce equality and predicted that "blood will flow."

Dr. Green insisted today the Klan's appearance in Wrightsville was not meant to intimidate Negroes; it merely was a ceremony to deliver a charter to the Wrightsville klavern.

Curley and Ely Indorse MacArthur

By The Associated Press

The Democratic revolt against President Truman cropped up in the North yesterday.

Two Massachusetts Democrats, Boston Mayor James M. Curley and Former Governor Joseph B. Ely, urged that the party seek to nominate General Douglas MacArthur for the Presidency.

Curley was pardoned by Mr. Truman last Thanksgiving after serving five months of a 16-to-18-months' sentence for mail fraud. Ely has split with the Democratic national leadership before.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

The Shooting War Comes Closer

UNTIL THE disaster to Czechoslovakia, there was a comfortable feeling here in Washington that the danger of war was something fairly remote—a matter of five to seven years. This was based largely on the assurance, which one heard over and over from those in authority, that Russia did not want a shooting war.

Childs

The comfortable assurance has vanished. It is not that the Soviet Union has come to want a war. But the attitude of the rulers in the Kremlin is now seen to make the possibility—yes, even the likelihood—of the war far more imminent.

This is so because of the fact that within the ruling clique in Moscow there is the conviction that the United States does not want a war. What is more, the Russians seem to believe that this country will be so divided during an election year that decisive action from the U. S. is impossible. Therefore they can, without too great a risk, move to get what they want short of war.

The danger is as acute as after the other Czechoslovak disaster of 10 years ago. Then a year intervened and the end was an open declaration of war.

WHILE THE sequence of events is likely to be of a different nature, the time span is even shorter. The next critical date is April 18, when the Italians go to the polls. If the Communists in Italy win close to a majority, then the same kind of grab for power will be started there that is today being carried to completion in Czechoslovakia. If Italy goes down, France can scarcely survive. Western Europe in the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

Perhaps the Senate, which has begun debate, will have adopted the bill by that deadline. But if the past is any precedent, in the House purblind men of the type of Representative John Tabor of New York will be repeating endlessly the shibboleths of the past. Meanwhile, Henry Wallace will be going up and down the country denouncing the recovery program and pleading the Russian cause.

What is doubly significant is the interpretation that the Kremlin puts on the Taber-Wallace noise. It is regarded as representative of American opinion.

WHEN SOVIET representatives in this country send reports to Moscow, they apparently feel that they must report what the Kremlin wants to hear. There is some reason to believe that those who don't send such reports find themselves quickly in disfavor. That is to say, if they report that the great mass of opinion is behind the recovery program, is for universal military training and is aware of America's vital interests in western Europe, they are speedily demoted. Just that is reported to have happened to one individual

Consider the timing. Secretary of State George C. Marshall has said that the European Recovery Program should be passed by able by that date, then the pipeline of food and supplies to Italy and France will begin to empty. April 1. If money is not available rope will be finished. The Soviets will have taken a decisive step toward their major goal, which is to isolate North America in every way from the rest of the world.

Here, then, is the danger. Communism, with the aid and expert direction of the Russians, will step beyond the line of America's vital interests. Only after that happens will Americans wake up to what it means. Then war will come.

That is why Western diplomats in Washington are urging—pleading is a better word—for an unequivocal statement now of where the vital line lies, this to to be coupled with a clear warning that Communist seizure of power by force beyond that line would mean war. This might be done in a joint British-United States-French statement.

But first and foremost it is essential that America's position be made clear beyond any doubt. If the machinery existed under our system, this would be the moment to form a coalition government of Democrats, Republicans and aggressive liberals who oppose the Communists.

Short of that, nothing less than a dramatic declaration to the world will suffice. In a meeting at the White House or before a joint session of Congress, the leaders of the two major parties should state that it is America's vital interest to preserve the independence of western Europe. All the Republican candidates for the Presidency should be present at the meeting, and perhaps also the leaders of organized labor and organized industry. Nothing less is likely to halt the drift toward catastrophe.

Stassen Urges Truman Action To Prevent Steel Price Raise

Berlin, N. H., March 3 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen called upon President Truman tonight to intervene personally to block a steel price raise.

The Republican presidential aspirant suggested a plan whereby the steel companies would revoke their recently announced price increases for six months with the understanding steel workers would not seek a pay raise during that "moratorium" period.

Stassen urged Mr. Truman to call both Benjamin F. Fairless, head of United States Steel Corp., and Philip Murray, head of the CIO Steelworkers Union, to the White House for a conference in an attempt to reach such an agreement.

Stassen came to this northern mill city in the White Mountains in a last-minute swing through New Hampshire—his second within a month—to seek support in the State's presidential preference primary only six days away.

Earlier he told a press conference in Littlejohn that he did not look upon the Michigan boom of Senator Arthur Vandenberg for the Republican presidential nomination as a "threat" to his own candidacy.

One reporter pointed out a move to draft Vandenberg seemed to be gaining strength.

Stassen replied:

"I am pleased to see the favorable attention being given Senator Vandenberg in the Republican Party. He is a great statesman."

"Do you consider him a threat to your own candidacy for the presidential nomination?" a reporter asked.

"No," replied Stassen. "I don't consider it that way."

UAW Board Wants New Party After '48

Chicago, March 3 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers executive board today said it would seek the formation of "a genuine progressive political party" after the 1948 national elections.

The board voted for formation of such a new party after unanimously approving the position of "the national CIO in rejecting and repudiating the 1948 presidential candidacy of Henry Wallace" and his third party.

A union spokesman said the UAW "was not committed to the support of any candidate."

'Professional' Status Denied News Workers

The National Labor Relations Board, yesterday ruled that newspaper special editors, rewrite men and independently functioning reporters are not "professional employes."

It was the first ruling on this issue since the effective date of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The board concluded, in a case involving the Jersey Observer, of Hoboken, N. J., that only the editor, co-publisher, secretary to the employer and all supervisors were not eligible for membership in a collective bargaining unit of the CIO American Newspaper Guild.

The board declined to classify as professional employes such jobs as city editor, night editor, sports editor, and reporters and county editors who operated at some distance from the home office.

"The evidence indicates that all the reporters in the editorial department perform substantially the same type of work and are subject to the same over-all departmental supervision," the board said.

The board said that none of the employes are required to have a license or undergo specialized training in a school of higher learning.

AFL Union Indicted Under Politics Ban

By the United Press

The Justice Department yesterday obtained its second indictment of a labor union on charges of violating the Taft-Hartley law's ban on political activity.

Acting swiftly on presentation of Government evidence, a Federal grand jury in New Haven, Conn., indicted a Hartford AFL painters' union local and its president, John R. O'Brien.

The union was charged with placing an advertisement in a Hartford newspaper calling for the defeat of Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and six Connecticut Congressmen who voted for the Taft-Hartley law.

The indictment also accused the union of sponsoring a political broadcast over radio station WKNB.

The law forbids a labor union to make any expenditure on behalf of any candidate for Federal office. Violations are punishable by $5000 fines for the union and $1000 and a year in prison for responsible officers.

Strike Arbiter Goes Before GSI Trustees Today

Both sides in the 59-day-old GSI cafeteria strike yesterday were considering a settlement proposal made by Attorney George E. Strong, Government-appointed peacemaker.

Strong said he was to appear today at a meeting of the GSI board of trustees, presumably to discuss the corporation's reaction to Strong's recommendations.

Up to last night, there had also been no answer from the union, Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers. Strong discussed the proposal with union leaders Tuesday, when he submitted the plan to both sides.

GSI, operators of 42 cafeterias for the Government, has stood firm thus far in its refusal to bargin with the union because officers of the parent union, United Public Workers, have not taken the non-Communist oath.

To Speed Case

NLRB Cuts Scope of Suit Against ITU

Indianapolis, March 3 (AP).—Government attorneys, in a hurry for action, cut down today the scope of an injunction they are seeking against the International Typographical Union.

They voluntarily threw overboard the so-called "feather-bedding" phase of the case.

In more legal language, the office of Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, is no longer asking Federal Judge Luther M. Swygert to prevent the ITU from causing newspaper publishers to pay for services which are not performed.

But Denham is still charging the union with that Taft-Hartley Act violation in his companion case pending before an NLRB trial examiner. The charge is in connection with a long-standing ITU rule that certain newspaper ads must be set in type locally, even if the newspaper has received the ads, already prepared, from another city. The union has denied that this rule violates the law.

Winthrop Johns, representing Denham, explained to reporters he withdrew the request because he did not want to "delay proceedings" at this point by presenting evidence on the matter.

The Denham office has also charged the AFL union with—and is still seeking a temporary injunction to block—the following alleged Taft-Hartley violations:

1. Trying to cause publishers to accept a renewal of the closed shop, under which only union members can be hired.
2. Coercing publishers in their choice of foremen.
3. Restraining employes in the exercise of their legal rights.

ITU Votes to Boost Strike Assessment

Indianapolis, March 3 (AP).—International Typographical Union members approved the proposal to increase their strike fund assessments to 5 per cent of their weekly pay by a majority of 23,352, Secretary-Treasurer Don Hurd announced today.

A final tabulation of the vote taken last month by 850 locals showed 44,829 for and 21,477 against the proposal, Hurd said.

The assessment formerly was ½ of 1 per cent.

Union officials have estimated the increase will put about one million dollars monthly into the strike fund.

CIO Meat Packers Set Nation-Wide Strike March 16

Chicago, March 3 (AP).—A CIO union called a Nation-wide strike of its 100,000 meat packing plant workers today for March 16.

The strike of CIO United Packinghouse Workers, was directed against Armour & Co., Cudahy Packing Co., Swift & Co., Wilson & Co., John Morrell & Co., Hy-Grade Food Products Corp. and other companies throughout the Nation. The union called it to enforce demands for a 29-cent-an-hour wage increase.

A strike would cut the Nation's consumer meat supply about in half, with the East feeling the pinch more than other sections, industry sources said. A shortage of fresh meat cuts would hit the average household within a few days after any work stoppage.

Standard Oil's Hands Unclean In Patent Suit, Says Perlman

The Justice Department contended yesterday that four Standard Oil companies have turned to the Supreme Court with "unclean hands" in an attempt to recover title to valuable patents of German origin now held by the United States Government.

Opposing Sandard's appeal to the court, Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman asserted that the companies engaged in "sham transactions" to conceal and to prevent the wartime seizure of assets in this country allegedly owned by Germany's I. G. Farben Industrie.

This, he told the court in a brief, raises a question "whether the plaintiff's cloaking of enemy assets and other actions for the benefit and on behalf of an enemy made the plaintiffs themselves 'enemies' within the meaning of that term as it is used in the Trading With the Enemy Act."

"Plaintiffs who do not come into court with clean hands are disqualified from recovering any of the property in suit," Perlman said.

The case involves the seizure by the United States Alien Property Custodian early in the war of several hundred oil and chemical patents and various blocks of stock in American corporations which the custodian declared to be Farben-owned.

Standard Oil of New Jersey and three subsidiaries, Standard Oil Development Co., Standard Catalytic Co., (formerly Standard I. G. Co., Inc.), and Jasco, Inc., sued the custodian in 1944. They ask for recovery of everything seized from them, contending that all patents and shares involved were acquired by them "in good faith" and were therefore American property.

Party Card a 'Plant,' Labor Chief Charges

Examination of Signature by Experts Demanded by Hollywood Strike Figure

By The Associated Press

Herbert K. Sorrell said yesterday that a Communist Party card was "planted" against him and asked for handwriting experts to examine it.

Sorrell, testifying under oath at a House Labor Subcommittee investigating the 17-month-old Hollywood strike, swore that he has never been a Communist. He shouted in redfaced anger:

"If anybody comes to me with a plan to overthrow the United States Government by force, he's got to fight me first."

Sorrell is president of the AFL Conference of Studio Unions, one of the major union groups involved in the 17-month-old Hollywood movie strike.

At the outset, Sorrell told the subcommittee, headed by Representative Kearns (R., Pa.), that he would "expose the filth in labor relations in the movie industry."

He added: "I am going to call names high in your Government offices and expose them."

"If I had ever joined the Communist Party, I'd just as soon tell you because you couldn't deport me back to Missouri where I was born. There isn't a thing you could do about it."

Expert Identified Signature

The purported Communist Party card, introduced as evidence, bore the signature "Herbert Stewart" and was issued for the "first half of 1937."

The signature has been identified by Clark Sellers, California handwriting expert, as Sorrell's handwriting.

"I wonder if the Communists need you inside the party. I wonder if you're not doing a better job outside. For the last hour, you've been telling us what good fellows they are."

Sorrell reddened. "I'm just answering charges," he said. "I haven't even begun to tell why I dislike Communists."

"It might be just coincidence for you to sponsor them once or twice," Owens said, "but time after time, it becomes a habit."

Representative Landis (R., Ind.) asked Sorrell if he approves Russia's plans and program. Sorrell hesitated, then said slowly:

"I'm against aggression and it looks to me that the Soviet Union is an aggressor at this time. If they lift the iron curtain, I'm going there and find out."

Clay Sees Reich 'Upturn'

Stuttgart, Germany, March 3 (AP). Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today western Germany "has gone through its worst," but that increased Communist activity can be expected. "Germany is beginning its upturn," Clay said.

Brothers Confess Two Cab Slayings

of a fish we were going to pull out when we (Winter and Dunn) went to George Garner's at about 8 o'clock that night. It's a one-room apartment, in a poor district, but rather neatly kept.

"We just walked in and told George we wanted to take him down to headquarters for questioning. We didn't tell him why we wanted to question him, but he knew all right.

"He didn't protest at all, and he didn't say much. He threw on a jacket, his coat, and hat, and started to leave with us, when he turned back, stuck his hand under the pillow of his bed.

"My watch," George explained bringing it out and coolly strapping it on his wrist. Brother, we almost missed that one. I reached over and said: 'Let me see that watch!' I looked it over, and on the back was inscribed one word: 'Howard.' Sure, it was the watch taken from Jones, the dead cabbie."

For four days the police department had been grappling in the dark for a link to the double slayings. Every available detective had been put on the case, and the police force on night duty had been doubled. And now they had the watch!

Two hours later—having learned the whereabouts of Lawrence from George—detectives dropped in at the second brother's residence, and brought him in, too. By that time, George had broken under the grilling of police, led by Lieut. E. E. Scott, and had admitted both crimes, naming his brother as the actual gun slayer.

Again and again, George was asked—according to an observer at the questioning—"Why did you beat the drivers? Why did you kill them?"

He quickly recovered his composure after the confession. When asked if he felt better after getting it off his chest, replied affirmatively. He said the murders had been on his conscience, and that he would have turned in to the police if his "blood-brother" were not also implicated.

First inkling that the police were hot on the trail of the slayers came out at police headquarters around 9 p. m. Tuesday, when reporters noticed homicide detectives rushing in and out with revived zeal. Shortly before midnight, Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett—who remained for most of the night's questioning of the prisoners—told newsmen: "We have two good suspects."

At 2 a. m. Wednesday, Acting Detective Capt. Robert V. Murray, announced that one of the brothers had confessed, implicating the other.

The brothers were each formally charged with two counts of first-degree murder at 5:30 a. m.

Just as the watch tripped up George, so younger brother Lawrence found it difficult to explain the presence of a stained gun-clip found in his quarters. Lawrence admitted, according to police, the clip had been removed from the murder weapon, a foreign-make gun, believed to be a German "P-38."

The gun was thrown into the Potomac from Key Bridge the night of the slaying. Police have asked the Navy for use of a special gadget—an underwater magnetic device—to recover the pistol.

The brothers were also confronted by several witnesses who identified them; three who said they saw them pushing Hardy's stalled cab; one who said he saw them driving the cab; and two others who had "corroborative" evidence.

Shortly after 10 a. m. the Garners were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. During the hour-long proceedings before and after the brief arraignment, the handcuffed brothers sat quietly and composed in the reception room of the commissioner's office.

George, nattily dressed in a blue-gray gabardine suit and red-plaid sport shirt, chewed gum and read a newspaper account of the search for the slayers. George is about 5 feet, 9 or 10 inches, of medium build.

Young brother Lawrence, somewhat disheveled in a blue sports shirt open at the collar and baggy brown trousers, sat pensive, eyes off in space, chin cupped in hand. Slightly shorter than his brother, Lawrence is broader-shouldered and a little stockier. One of his feet twitched in a nervous rhythm.

Neither was sullen, although George said nothing. Lawrence conversed with detectives and deputy marshals rather amiably, but displayed concern about his gray covert topcoat and big-apple hat, which police removed as evidence. He had to be reassured several times that the apparel would eventually be returned.

At the moment of arraignment it was Lawrence—the confessed killer—who temporarily wilted. George stood up straight, blinking eyes and chewing gum. Lawrence sagged visibly.

The United States Commissioner ordered the brothers held without bond and set March 12 as the date for preliminary hearing. The brothers were then turned over to the United States marshal for transfer to the District jail.

Handcuffed to two deputy marshals, four abreast, the brothers ducked wildly to hide faces from photographers as they left the Commissioner's office, at 7th and E sts. nw. A wide-eyed crowd of about 100 spectators, which had gathered at the corner, jeered the Gernrs as thy wre ld into th huge marshal's prison van.

After the night-long questioning of the brothers, police reconstructed Friday night's sadistic murders as follows:

The brothers, unemployed for some time and intent on a robbery, hailed Hardy's cab at New Jersey ave. and O st. nw., and ordered the hacker to drive them to New Jersey and I se. Here they forced him down an embankment to the railroad tracks, robbed him of $3.80, beat him mercilessly, shot him once through the waist, and left him for dead.

The robbery took place about 7:30 p. m. Friday. Hardy was discovered about half an hour later by two boys who heard him groaning. He died the following morning.

[According to one detective, George although participating in the beating, urged his brother not to kill Hardy, and walked away before Lawrence fired the fatal shot. Police would not officially confirm this.]

The brothers then returned to Hardy's cab, found it stalled, and tried to push it to a start. A man drove up in a red convertible and pushed the cab to New Jersey and M. He drove on when the cab failed to get started. The brother abandoned Hardy's cab at this point and hailed Jones. They forced Jones to drive around to Second and Canal sts. se. There, in an alleyway, they robbed Jones of $4, beat him over the head, and shot him through the head, instantly killing him.

The shootings took place about half a block apart—separated by railroad tracks—in an area occupied by warehouses and surrounded by some of the city's worst slums. At just about the time the police were called to the scene of the Hardy shooting, the brothers were killing their second victim.

The Garner brothers did not admit any other crimes, according to police, but they were identified by Chester A. Jackson, 44, of 3605 Warder st. nw., also a cab driver, as the two men who attacked and robbed him the night of January 30. Jackson was also brutally gun-whipped over the head, and suffered partial paralysis as a result.

Police Chief Barrett had high praise for all the men who had participated in breaking the case, particularly the robbery and homicide squads. John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, issued the following citation to the police:

"Their work in bringing the slayers to justice should serve as an effective warning to all criminals who believe they may ply their foul trade amongst the citizens of Washington. The achievement of the department in the taxicab cases is police work at its best."

Both brothers have criminal records. George was in trouble with the police as a juvenile. In 1943, he was convicted of forgery and given a 6-to-8-month sentence. Later, he was arrested on charges of petty larceny, attempted larceny, assault, threats and cruelty to animals. Lawrence was convicted in 1943 of auto theft, and was sentenced to 1-to-3 years. Lawrence served with the Army for 18 months, part of the time overseas, and received an honorable discharge October 12, 1946.

According to Mrs. Charity Miles, of 2144 L st. nw., 10-year-old grandmother of the two brothers, their mother had been ill for many years, and died in 1937. "If the mother had lived," Mrs. Miles believes, "these children wouldn't be going crazy today." She said the boys' father and an older brother live and work here.

Born here, the Garner brothers attended parochial and public school and as children—according to the grandmother—"were just like any other kids—cowboys, toy guns, marbles . . . and getting along together." Later, they sold papers, did odd jobs, "worked hard."

Drawing indicates where Howard Jones (A) and James Hardy (B), slain cab drivers, were found. Hardy's cab (C) was nearby

Police Efforts Concentrated on Finding Slayer of Meyrovitch

Who fired a fatal bullet into the body of Meyer Meyrovitch in his grocery store Monday night?

Homicide squad detectives picked up this question with additional intensity yesterday after the solution of the brutal cab driver killings.

They regard the murder of the genial storekeeper in his market, at 90 O st. nw., as another "tough" case.

It is not one of those mysteries to be solved by brilliant armchair deduction. Only endless, patient investigation of every scrap of information, no matter how meager, will crack this case, they say.

Clews in the Meyrovitch murder have been few. No fingerprints of any value were found. The death weapon was carried away.

Police put out a "lookout" for a suspect based on vague descriptions furnished by two neighbors, a man and woman, who observed a stranger in the vicinity at the time of the murder.

But they did not get a good glimpse of the man's face so it was useless to show them rogue's galler photographs.

Although detectives continued to prowl the city yesterday and last night there have been no likely suspects picked up. One man was taken to headquarters at about 6 p. m. for questioning but was freed a short time later.

George Garner, one of the confessed hacker murderers, lives not far from the Meyrovitch store, but police have virtually ruled out the Garner brothers as possible killers of the grocer.

The bullet that killed Meyrovitch came from a revolver of smaller caliber than the one used in shooting the two cab drivers.

Police still favor the theory that Meyrovitch was shot down during a holdup. But they are not sure that the holdup, if it was one, succeeded. In the grocer's pockets were $1587 in cash and $404 in eight Government checks. There was about $40—all in change—still in the cash register when Meyrovitch's body was discovered.

If theer were bills in the register, the killer may have grabbed them and fled.

Although Meyrovitch extended credit and made small cash loans to some of his customers there is no indication, police said, that he made any loans large enough to supply a motive for murder.

Police investigation also convinced them that it was not unusual for Meyrovitch to be carrying such a large sum on his person. His family said he usually carried a good amount of money so he could pay for his grocery supplies in cash.

With solution of the cab driver deaths, Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett canceled his order which put all policemen on extra duty and provided 200 additional uniformed men on the streets between 6 p. m. and midnight.

However, detectives and plainclothesmen were told they are to consider themselves on 24-hour assignmnt until the killer of the 39-year-old grocer is behind bars.

Greasepaint On Celluloid

By Richard L. Coe

IF YOU'RE IN LOVE with theater—which passion can be as enthralling as Dante's yen for Beatrice—you'll be mesmerized by "A Double Life," at the Palace. It's a grand picture.

For here at last is the wonderland of greasepaint on the screen. Here are the people of the stag, with thir convrsational "dears" and "darlings," their mercurial moods, their erratic hours, their minute, complex world that forever dangles on a web of nerves.

Here, too, is a brilliantly bravura performance from Ronald Colman. That veteran actor has a part any blueblood of the theater would give 10 years of his life to play. I can think of several friends in the theater whom that character resembles, sharp, jaunty, moody. Sure, they're innately egotistical—they have to be; but they're fascinatingly likable.

Of course there's a trick to "A Double Life." It's the story of an actor playing "Othello," who goes off his rocker while portraying that tragic figure of jealous vengeance. His imagination runs riot and he takes to actual murder. You may not believe all you see him go through, but the endless details that have been lavished onto the screen will completely beguile you.

It has taken real theater people to show the movies what the world of theater really is. Ruth Gordon, an actress since her childhood and now a successful playwright, wrote the script with her husband, Garson Kanin, one of the master stagers of the day. (You get a fleeting glimpse of him at a reading-of-the-play scene.)

"A DOUBLE LIFE." Universal-International release produced by Michael Kanin. Screenplay by Ruth Gordon and Garson Kanin. Directed by George Cukor. Photography by Milton Krasner and David S. Horsley. At the Palace.

Cukor Draws on Early Life

And the director is George Cukor, who once was stage director for the Charles Frohman Company at New York's historic Empire Theater, the very house where many of these scenes are laid. Cukor has fondly remembered the days when he directed Ethel Barrymore, Jeanne Eagels and Laurette Taylor on the same stage that he now brings so richly to life.

The settings of the New York theatrical world, the backstage whiffs at the old Empire, the vivid apartments, a chattery first night party, the dark loneliness of the streets at three in the morning—the hour when performers are relaxing from the strain of a night's work—the rush of the Third ave. elevated are all captured with masterly camera effect by Photographer David S. Horsley.

There's a fine performance, too, from Signe Hasso. She plays the former wife of the moody actor, still his best friend but unable to live with his erratic ways. In the play within a play (a la "Pagliacci") she is a striking (Desdemona. One hopes that now the gifted Swedish player has exhibited her skill, she will be given further chances in Hollywood.

I'm not saying that "A Double Life" doesn't have its weaknesses. Its premise that an actor can go so completely nuts is not to be taken too factually and there is an overlong quality about its resolution.

But after the endless parade of films purporting to depict backstage life, it's grand to find one that does it, a picture that takes you with striking realism into a world essentially unreal.

KATHARINE CORNELL is bringing her splendid production of "Antony and Cleopatra" to Baltimore's Ford's Theater the week of March 22, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees . . . Miss Kitty will not be coming to Washington. . . . With Godfrey Tearle as her co-star, Miss Cornell has made history and broken jinxes in this classic tragedy . . . She will have played 133 performances in New York, 53 more in the tryout tour . . . Now she's bound for that week in Baltimore, two in Philly, two in Boston and four in Chicago . . . After that, one of the memorable productions of a decade will probably be history, for a tour next season is unlikely if uncertain.

SOME OF THOSE bright "Ice Cycles" youngsters yesterday did what the basketball and hockey chaps have been doing this winter . . . They tripped out from Uline's, where their cheerful ice revue is playing, to pay a visit with the boys at Walter Reed . . . Thanks, by the way, to that telephone voice which agreed with us that though "Ice Cycles" isn't so big a show as "Ice-Capades," the current show somehow is more enjoyable.

THANKS, too, to those thoughtful readers who chipped in to the Children's Theater "Pleasure Fund" for underprivileged youngsters a few weeks ago . . . That was mighty fine and the fund appreciated it . . . Next play in that series at Lisner is this Saturday morning and afternoon, "Penrod."

Parricide in Hiding Was Senate Visitor

New York, March 3.—William Callahan, 16, who fled his Montgomery, Ala., home after killing his father last month, spent some of his time as a fugitive studying Washington's public buildings.

William Callahan

The boy, who surrendered to New York City police last month, spentn night, said he was interested in the architecture of the buildings in the Capital. His ambition, he confided, has been to study architecture at Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn.

Young Callahan, who comes from a prominent Alabama family, told police he visited the Senate daily and after quitting Washington worked for several weeks on a tree farm near the Capital. He said he left the job because his employer would't pay him the $1 a day he had been promised.

The boy, whose grandfather, William Washington Callaham, was presiding judge at the famed Scottsboro rape trial in 1931, said he killed his father because the latter refused to repay $525 he had borrowed from the boy, which he had saved for a college education.

The father, a 47-year-old unemployed civil engineer, was shot to death with a .22-calibre rifle in their home last February 3.

"It was hell on earth living with him," the boy told police. "I don't think I'm any worse off now than I was before. He used to spend all the money I could make. He was always drinking and fighting with mom and sister, and I didn't like that. I'm not exactly sorry I killed him."

Montgomery authorities were en route here to take him back to face a homicide charge.

18 Stations Join Networks in Fight to Editorialize Over Air

By The Associated Press

Eighteen major radio stations yesterday joined the major networks in their attack on the rule which bars them from editorializing.

Many of the stations "feel no particular urge" to take sides on controversial issues, said their counsel, W. Theodore Pierson, but he told the Federal Communications Commission they believe that "fundamental rights" of free expression are curbed by FCC's policy.

The witness questioned FCC's authority to base the granting of a broadcast license on its own decisions whether the station's programs are "in the public interest." Such action, he said, amounts to censorship.

Other witnesses, including Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) and a spokesman for the American Jewish Congress, disagreed. Celler, who took part in the congressional debate on the 1934 Communications Act, told the FCC hearing:

"Congress did not intend that the air should be dominated by radio chains, large advertisers or large manufacturers.

"Freedom of the air should assure that John Q. Public has the right to hear opinion from all sources, not only from the station owners."

FCC Chairman Wayne Coy asked whether it would be proper to let radio stations take sides if FCC also required the station to give its opponents full opportunity to air their views.

"Yes, it would be proper if the opposing side were given," Celler said.

Speaking for the Jewish group, Prof. Milton D. Stewart of Columbia University asked FCC to stand firmly by its so-called "Mayflower decision" of 1941, which fixed the rule forbidding station owners to push political or controversial points of view.

Chairman Coy voiced "interest" in proposals by Stewart and another witness, which went even further. FCC, they said, should set up a "regulatory body" or a "complaints bureau" to keep tabs on the fairness of radio programs.

"The Mayflower decision banning owner editorials—inadequate as it is—stands as one of the few remaining bulwarks against broadcaster irresponsibility in the discussion of public policy," Stewart said.

Stewart presented a statement from Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Congress president. It advised FCC that a change of policy would bring "danger that the limited air waves may be used to create racial and religious dissension."

Stewart and Radio Columnist Saul Carson of the New Republic and other publications, asked FCC to create a bureau for what Carson called "the forgotten man of radio—the listener."

"I am interested in that proposal," Coy told the witness. "The complaints from listeners are numerous, I assure you."

Commissioner Clifford J. Durr suggested that such a "regulatory" job might be beyond FCC's powers. Coy suggested that if such power were granted, it might be better exercised by a different agency better equipped for the watchdog role.

Truman Asks Act Revision

that accompanied the President's message that it will oppose any pay raise plan to give each Federal employe a flat amount. And it has the full support of the President in its opposition.

In his message, the President paid high tribute to Federal workers, the first time he has publicly lauded the career service. He told the Congress:

"This report (the Civil Service annual report) deals with the men and women who, as Federal employes, are serving the people of the United States. The strength of our Government is in direct proportion to the character of those employes, and with knowledge of that strength, we can take pride in our Federal workers and the job they are doing. I know them to be hard-working and sincere in their efforts to contribute to the well-being of the United States.

"I desire to express my deep appreciation of the splendid service they have rendered during the very difficult transition from war to peace. The quality of that service has been such that I can say with emphasis that the investment we have made in the development of a career Civil Service over the last 65 years has paid, and is paying, real dividends in the form of loyal and efficient service to the citizens of this Nation.

"The advancement of those in the career service to positions of increased responsibility and highest rank on the basis of merit is ample evidence of the value of their service. I shall continue to see to it that the Civil Service system is constantly strengthened and that merit and efficiency are rewarded by advancement."

Details of the Classification Act suggestions were included in the Civil Service annual report. Briefly, these recommendations were made to Congress:

That the five classes of employes under the act be merged into a single schedule with 11 grades; that Civil Service be empowered to develop standards to be used as guides in determining the classification of Federal jobs; that agency heads be compelled to follow these standards in classifying jobs, and that Civil Service be given the authority to post-audit agency classifications.

This recommendation is an open invitation to the Senate and House Civil Service Committees to hear Administration officials on the pay raise problem. If and when they testify, they will urge revamping of the act as a pattern for any pay raise legislation. Up to this point, Administration people have refused to testify on the pay issue because of the President's opposition to it "at this time."

Civil Service also asked Congress in its report to approve legislation which would:

1. Give it authority to use discretion in imposing penalties for Hatch (antipolitics) Act violations;
2. Define those periods of service in the armed services which do and do not entitle veterans to job restoration rights;
3. That a veteran should be paid for the time he loses when he is illegally fired and ordered restored to his job by Civil Service;
4. To pay any employe for the time he loses when he is suspended from his job on charges and is later cleared;
5. Require veterans to obtain a passing grade on Civil Service exams before their 5 or 10 preference points are added;
6. To limit 10-point preference only to those veterans whose disabilities are compensable under VA laws;
7. Bring Federal workers under the Unemployment Compensation system;
8. To eliminate the requirement for Senate confirmation of first, second, and third class postmasters;
9. Bring all attorney jobs under the Civil Service system;
10. To punish private employment agencies which charge applicants for alleged help in obtaining Federal employment for them, and to
11. Allow Federal agencies to detail scientific, technical and professional employes to universities, industrial plants or laboratories for advanced study.

Meantime, the House Civil Service Committee yesterday heard 35 House members indorse Federal worker pay raise bills. In addition, 20 others filed favorable statements. This makes 90 House members who have publicly lined up behind pay raises. And about 50 of their colleagues are ready to join them at today's session.

Of the 35 who appeared in person yesterday, 5 proposed flat $1000 increases for postal employes; 12 favored flat $800 boosts for all workers, and 18 indorsed "substantial" pay raises, but benefits for postal workers were generally stressed.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 3.—Like a guy caught standing with a smoking gun over a recent corpse, Clark Griffith is making a clean breast of his 1948 situation, and asking the mercy of the Washington fans with respect to his Washington ball club.

POVICH

For the first time in the 47 years he has been managing or owning major league ball clubs, Griffith is claiming no pennant or even suggesting that he has a first division team. He has broken completely with custom, and confesses that his Nats are no pennant threat whatsoever.

"I don't want to misrepresent anything," the 78-year-old owner of the Nats is saying. "I don't want to build up any false hopes for Washington fans. We don't look anything like a solid ball club. Too many rookies that we're gambling on, no guarantee that we'll have hitting power, too many jobs to fill, and too many better-looking clubs than we are."

That's bordering on heresy for Griffith, who in past years always talked big about his Washington teams at this stage of the season, and delighted in promising pennants and such to the home town people.

"THERE'S NO SENSE kidding anybody, including myself, about our situation this year," Griffith says. "I'm trying to be honest with the Washington fans. There will be some things they will like about our ball club, I hope, and I know if we lay all our cards on the table they'll be tolerant. They're the best fans of any city in the world, and I want to give them a club they can root for.

"This situation is of our own making. We've deliberately gone into a rebuilding program that we hope will bear fruit and I'm willing to take the raps for a couple of years. We are going to be a rookie ball club, but we weren't going anywhere with the regulars we had last year. That's why I traded off Spence and Priddy. Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis retired, but with all of them we couldn't do better than seventh place last season.

"So we've gone in for youth. I think the fans will make all allowances and like the whole idea of a young, hustling ball club. I've told Joe Kuhel he doesn't have to finish in the first division to make good—just to give us a hustling team of youngsters the fans can take an interest in and watch improve, I hope.

"WE'RE GIVING UP the idea of scoring runs in bunches. We haven't got that kind of power. We've got to hit and run and scramble on those bases. But if we don't have anything else we're going to have speed. I don't think there will be a slow man on our club. But one thing we have got, and that's pitching. That's something we can tie to, and we may lose a lot of tough games but our pitching will keep us in a lot that we can win.

"If it wasn't for our pitching we'd be passing through the same stage Connie Mack did with some of his bad ball clubs. But Connie didn't have pitching in those bad years. I don't think any club can start four better pitchers than Wynn, Masterson, Hudson and Haefner or Scarborough. If just a couple of our rookie infielders or outfielders come through we'll begin to look like a pretty good ball team, I think.

"We can get a big lift if this young fellow Kozar makes good at second base. Nobody questions his fielding ability, and his hitting record has a lot in its favor. He's a rare kid who has bettered his batting average in each of the three minor leagues he stepped up in, unlike the guys whose average goes down when they move into a faster league.

"KOZAR AND GIL COAN, those are the two we'd like to see come through for us. They could be tremendous ball players, both of them. They might set the rest of the team afire, and we'd come up more quickly than we think. That extra year of experience for Coan in the minors could be the big item in his showing this year. He has everything to be a big star in a major league outfield.

"Our big gambles are with Sullivan at short, Yost at third and Culberson and whoever else makes our outfield along with Coan. It isn't the kind of a club I'd want to start out with if we had a chance to win the pennant, but we're not thinking about a pennant. I could buy or claim older players, but I won't do that now. We can't develop our kids by leaving them on the bench.

"I don't want the Washington fans to expect too much of us. I hope they're with me in this rebuilding business. I could make a better showing by grabbing off some of the surplus veterans around, but it wouldn't be as interesting a team either to me or the fans. When we come home in April, I don't expect to have a good ball club, but I think Washington fans will be seeing the makings of one."

Wm. & Mary Upsets Wake Forest; Maryland, GW in Debuts Today

Strong Finish Gives Indians 61-56 Win

Durham, N. C., March 3 (AP).—A hard-driving underdog William and Mary team wiped out a 13-point first half deficit to upset Wake Forest, 61-56, here tonight as the 25th annual Southern Conference basketball tournament opened.

The Indians from Williamsburg, Va., staged a smashing comeback from the verge of an apparent rout to oust the favored Deacons.

Outside of two ties early in the first half and a 31-all period early in the second, William and Mary trailed until 5 minutes before the finish.

A string of 12 straight points gave William and Mary the ball game as they pressed the Deacons to the limit and the harried Wake Forest team committed costly errors under the pressure.

The high point of the William and Mary surge was a four-basket performance in 55 seconds that moved them to a 54-all tie with less than five minutes to go.

Jere Bunting, Ed McMillan, Chet Giermak and Charley Sokol all came through with hoops in rapid-fire order as the befuddled Deacons repeatedly lost the ball to their smaller rivals.

Once ahead, William and Mary streaked by the Deacons. The underdogs controlled the ball smartly in the last couple of minutes, drawing fouls from the faltering Wake Forest club as it sought desperately to gain possession.

Duke and South Carolina met in tonight's second game.

American, C. U. Open M-D Play

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

American U. and Catholic U. start tourney play tonight in Baltimore with the Mason-Dixon Conference championship at stake and a trip to Kansas City the winner's reward.

As last year, the conference titlist will compete in the National Association of Intercollegiate Basketball tournament which starts Monday in Kansas City's spacious municipal auditorium.

Thirty-two teams, with Marshall of West Virginia defending champion, engage in the NAIB affair and winner will go to the Olympic tryouts in New York in late March.

Of the two local entrants, American U. figures to have a good chance for the Mason-Dixon crown. The Eagles' stock received a boost when they handed Loyola of Baltimore, host team, its only league setback, 54-48.

Staff Cassell crossed up the Loyola team that's favored to win its second straight championship by alternating between a zone defense and man-for-man play.

The Eagles, who lost only 2 conference games in 12, are favored to breeze past Towson, Md., Teachers in their first round. If they do, they'll meet the winner of the Catholic U.-Randolph-Macon game in the semifinals.

The Cardinals open the tournament against the Ashland, Va., team that handed it a 59-56 defeat in an earlier game. If Capt. Gene Szklarz's bad ankle holds up, Catholic U. may surprise by winding up in the finals.

Terps and Davidson Play in Afternoon

Special Dispatch to The Post

Durham, N. C., March 3.—Heartened by William and Mary's upset performance in the first game of the Southern Conference tournament here tonight at Duke's indoor stadium, Maryland hoped to duplicate the feat against Davidson tomorrow.

Although the Terps edged Davidson, 59-58, in their third game of the regular season, the North Carolinians will be favored.

Davidson finished fast and took fourth position in the conference race, displacing Maryland. Fluette Stewart's boys slipped all the way to seventh when they lost their last game to George Washington.

Meanwhile, the second-seeded Colonials were on hand to watch the Duke-South Carolina game. GW meets the winner tomorrow night at 9. Of the two, Coach Ottis Zahn would prefer to meet South Carolina.

George Washington did manage to squeeze past Duke here, 48-47, but had an easier time beating South Carolina, 60-49. True, the Gamecocks came back to surprise GW in Washington, 70-64, but the Colonials feel it was just one of those things. Duke figures to be a tougher foe, playing on its own court.

There doesn't seem to be much future for Maryland. Even if the Terps beat favored Davidson, they have to meet the winner of the N. C. State-William and Mary game. And that's another way of saying N. C. State, overwhelming favorite and class of the Conference.

George Washington can avoid the Wolfpack until the finals if both win all their games. The way they have the tourney doped here, even then it will be too early for GW, or any other team, to face Everett Case's national scoring leaders.

Hoyas Beat Penn State

State College, Pa., March 3.—Kenny Brow nand Tommy O'Keefe collared 14 points each as Georgetown University downed Penn State, 49-43, i na basketball encore here tonight. Earlier in the year, the Lions dumped the Hoyas at Washington.

It was all Georgetown as the Hoyas snared their third victory in a row, and their twelfth of the season.

The Lions were unable to find the range in the first half, and were successful in netting only four of 24 attempts from the field.

The Hoyas rushed into an early lead, laving the floor at intermission with a 24-18.

Jack Biery was State's only effective marksman, with four field goals and six of eight foul tries.

Penn-State was in the running only twice, early in the game when the Lions pulled up on even terms with the Hoyas for a brief period and again four minutes after the second half started when the score was deadlocked at 25-all.

N. C. State Nearing U. S. Scoring Title

New York, March 3(AP).—For the first time in ten years, a team other than Rhode Island State appears headed for national high scoring honors.

Continuing their 77.1 point pace, North Carolina State's tournament-bound cagers topped the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau's major college list for the second straight week.

Including game of February 28, the "Hoosier Hotshots" had piled up 2,159 points in 28 contests as against Rhode Island's 1,582 in 21. R. I.'s average is 75.3.

The bureau has been keeping records for a decade and the Firehouse Boys from Rhode Island hitherto have always led the rest. The Rhode Islanders, however, seem a cinch for the runner-up position. Bowling Green (Ohio) is trailing third with a 70.5 average having racked up 2,184 markers in 31 contests. Lawrence Tech is fourth at 70.1 and Western Kentucky fifth with 69.4.

Of the five leaders, three already have clinched tournament berths. North Carolina State and Western Kentucky have been selected for the national invitation tourney while Lawrence Tech will play in the NAIB meet.

As expected, Oklahoma A. and M.'s precisionists lead the way in defense. The Aggies, Missouri Valley champions, have held their opposition to 31.8 points per game. Alabama is second with 39.7, Wyoming third with 40.1, Creighton fourth with 40.8, and Tulane fifth with 41.7.

Southeastern Play Will Open Today

Louisville, Ky., March 3 (AP).—The annual efforts to shake Kentucky loose from its stranglehold on Southeastern Conference basketball championships will open here tomorrow.

Fourth-seeded Alabama gets the tough assignment of trying to eliminate a Georgia Tech team that, despite a poor record in seasonal play, is regarded as the No. 1 darkhorse in the curtain raiser at 1:30 p. m. (CST.).

Tulane, the team that is favored to represent its bracket in the final, will lock with Auburn at 3:15 p. m., followed at 7:30 p. m. by Tennessee's third-seeded Volunteers against Mississippi State, and at 9:15 p. m. by Kentucky against Florida.

Garden Schedules 3 Ten-Rounders

New York, March 3 (AP).—The Twentieth Century Sporting Club announced today that a triple-header — three 10-rounders — would feature the boxing card at Madison Square Garden March 26.

Eddie Giosa of Philadelphia will meet Rocky Rossano of Brooklyn in a welterweight engagement; and Freddie Dawson of Chicago will take on Johnny Williams of Montgomery, Ala., in a lightweight scrap.

The third will send Rocky Castellani of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., against either Pete Mead of Grand Rapids, Mich., or Harold Green of Brooklyn. They are middleweights.

Nats' Trainer Has 'Cure' for Coan's Feet

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 3. — Gil Coan's troubles are nothing that a good cure couldn't cure, and to that end the Washington club is experimenting with a new prescription for the tender feet of its young outfielder.

For two season Coan has been a suffered from ailing feet in the Nats' training camp and thus lost out in his bids for a regular job, ending up on the Chattanooga Choo Choo, but this year the Nats are hopeful they have his problem licked.

It's Lentz's Problem

Tranier Doc Lentz, in fact, is a man with a mission in the Washington camp—a mission to avert the blisters and sand sores that formerly slowed the fleet Coan to a painful trot in training. The outfielder is allergic to something in the Florida sands and formerly it was treated as ringworm with generous doses of antiseptic powder.

But this spring Lentz, not convinced that Coan is suffering merely from tender skin on his feet which are susceptible to bruises from particles of sand, believes he has the remedy. Before he takes the field, Coan's feet are thickly smeared with grease ointment and then wrapped in yards of gauze to keep the sand out. What particles might seep in are supposed to float harmlessly in the grease.

Coan is a much more important guy in the Washington training camp this year. Despite the fact he is a rookie, he is looked to as the hottest article among the club's outfielders, following the retirement of Buddy Lewis and the trading of Stan Spence. Clark Griffith, who once turned down an offer of $100,000 for Coan by the Cubs, envisions him as the most valuable player on the club.

Finished Strong in '47

When he came back from Chattanooga last season and got into 11 games with the Nats he batted an even .500. Thus, last memories of him in a Washington uniform are impressive. He's easily distinguishable among the 30 men already in training, as the only wearer of white stockings, another precaution against infection of the feet.

Coan in the past two seasons has batted .370 and .339 for Chattanooga and led the Southern Association in a half dozen departments. He never lacked for confidence in his ability to play with Washington, and today declared "I'm ready to have a big year in the majors."

The day's news in the Washington camp was highlighted chiefly by the announcement the Nats had signed Harold Keller, younger brother of Charley Keller of Maryland University and Yankee fame. Griffith, who has been on young Keller's track for three seasons, received his signed contract today following the lad's discharge from the Navy.

Griff High on Keller

Griffith declared "We had to give him a hefty bonus to sign." He's 20 years old and huskier even than his hard-swinging older brother. He played in the outfield at Maryland, but in the service he converted himself into a catcher and he will be labeled as a backstop in the Washington camp.

The pitchers continued to dominate the activities at Tinker Field, with Manager Joe Kuhel beaming at the display of Sid Hudson, who resumed his fast-ball throwing, with no indication that he was bothered by the shoulder ailment of last year . . . Rookie Joe Jones, like Hudson a native of Chattanooga, and who pitched for Orlando last year, is attempting to emulate Hudson's leap from Class D to the majors . . . His side-arm delivery is termed "wicked." Tentatively he is under contract to Chattanooga but the Nats may retain him . . . Another fast-balling Rookie, Dick Welk, cut loose with midseason stuff today . . . The star of the batting drill was Ken McCreight, 200-pound Rookie Catcher from Charlotte who is giving Len Okrie a run for the No. 2 catching job . . . Walter Masterson, complaining of a cold in his shoulder muscles, missed the workout for the second day.

Janitor's Court Debut Shattering

SACRAMENTO, Calif., March 3 (AP).—The janitor's debut as a basketball player was brief—but loud.

Just before the crowd arrived for a basketball doubleheader, a janitor decided to try a few practice shots.

The glass backboard, which had been cracked previously, exploded. Glass splinters showered down on one end of the pavilion. The surprised but uninjured janitor picked off the pieces and hurried to his broom.

A wooden backboard was substituted and the games went on as scheduled.

Brundage a 'Dictator'

New York, March 3 (AP).—The Amateur Hockey Association team that represented the United States in the winter Olympic games over the protests of the American Olympic Committee came home today full of defiance of Avery Brundage.

Brundage

"He is a dictator and he always has been a dictator," said John D. Semple, the trainer, in referring to Brundage, American Olympic Committee president.

Semple, from Lynn, Mass., acted as spokesman for his charges, representing AHA.

Semple declared "they can have my AAU membership card" and asked of Brundage "is he proud of the expense money he used to pay to his pseudo-amateur track stars?"

Gridder Wounded

Huntington, W. Va., March 3 (U.P.).—E. E. (Bob) Sang, star tackle on Marshall College's 1947 football 11, was shot and seriously wounded last night by a youth who was attempting to break into a lunchroom.

Doctors gave the 27-year-old war veteran only a "50-50 chance" of survival. The incident occurred while Sang was en route to work as a night watchman.

Sang was struck in the abdomen. The youth fled. Sang is married and has two children.

Bing's No Bust

Hollywood, March 3 (AP).—Manager Bill Meyer of the Pittsburgh Pirates today looked over a "rookie" catcher and general utility man, and decided "he wouldn't be bad as a ball player."

Meyer may have been catering to the club's front office, however, because the newcomer was Vice President Bing Crosby.

As a battery of photographers invaded the Pirates' camp at the Hollywood ball park, Bing went through all the paces except sliding into a base.

He took a turn on the mound, behind the plate, hit a few fungoes and, as manager Meyer observed, he wasn't bad at all.

Leo Says Bums Are Best He's Ever Managed

Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, March 3 (AP).—There are no "humpty dumpties" on the Brooklyn Baseball Club this year, says Manager Leo Durocher—"every man is a good ball player."

Describing his present training squad as the best he ever managed, the Dodger boss added:

"I've never before had so much talent to choose a ball club from. A year ago fellows like Tommy Brown and Eddie Miksis were babies. I can see the difference this year—they have gained confidence."

Durocher's optimism received another lift when Catcher Bruce Edwards, the last holdout, signed his 1948 contract. Edwards is reported getting around $13,000.

Vandy Reported in Fold

Cincinnati, March 3 (AP).—The Cincinnati Times-Star said today that veteran southpaw pitcher Johnny Vander Meer had come to terms with the Cincinnati Reds in Tampa, Fla., and will sign a contract shortly.

The double-no-hit hurler, who won nine games and lost 14 last season, was the first Cincinnati holdout in many years.

Doby Strong Contender

Tucson, Ariz., March 3 (AP).—Larry Doby, first Negro player signed by an American League club, is a strong contender for an outfield job with the Cleveland Indians, Manager Lou Boudreau said today.

The Tribe pilot said there is as much difference between the Doby of today and the nervous youngster who joined the club in Chicago last summer as there is between Bob Feller and the greenest of rookie pitchers.

Doby came to the Indians as a second baseman but Boudreau said the Tribal brain trust decided to try him in the outfield "for several mechanical reasons."

Chapman Picks Infield

Clearwater, Fla., March 3 (AP).—Manager Ben Chapman today tagged Al Flair, Emil Verban, Eddie Miller and Bert Haas as the Phillies' probable 1948 infield.

Birmingham Ben expressed pleasure at being able to name his infield so early. He said it's been more than 15 years since a Phil manager had such infield talent.

The only spot in doubt, he said, is at first where Flair currently holds the inside track. Roy Cullenbine, who plays first as well as the infield, probably will land the job if Flair fails.

Browns Selling Farm?

Los Angeles, March 3 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler sad he had "been apprised" of negotiations by the St. Louis Browns for the sale of its Toledo, Ohio, farm club, adding that an official announcement probably would be forthcoming shortly.

Other baseball sources here reported they had learned a deal to sell the American Association club to Detroit "virtually has been consummated."

Derby Winner Twenty Grand Dies in Kentucky

Lexington, Ky., March 3 (U.P.). Twenty Grand, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont Stakes in 1931, died in his stall at Greentree Farms here last night at the age of 20.

Death of the famed son of St. Germans—Bonus was attributed to a twisted intestine. Since retiring from racing, he had been stabled at Greentree where he was unsuccessfully tried at stud.

Ridden by Charley Kurtsinger, Twenty Grand captured the '31 Derby in the sensational time of 2:01 4/5 for the mile-and-a-quarter. In the Preakness he finished second to Mate, who had run third in the Derby, and thus lost his chance at the "Triple Crown" of American racing. Again ridden by Kurtsinger, he came back to win the Belmont Stakes in 2:29 3/5 for the mile-and-a-half.

Poughkeepsie Regatta Tentative for June 22

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 3 (AP).—The 1948 Poughkeepsie regatta was set tentatively for June 22 today at a meeting of officials of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association.

McCarthy, Snead Titlists

Palm Beach, Fla., March 3 (AP).—George P. McCarthy, jr., of Bridgeport, Conn., and Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., won the Seminole Club's professional-amateur golf tournament today with a best ball of 127 for 36 holes.

The victory, played over the 6008-yard course, was worth approximately $64,000 in the pro-amateur winner pool.

Henry Ransom, Ravinia, Ill., professional, won $1500, first money in the $10,000 professional medalist tournament with a 36-hole total of 138.

Sherburne Prescott of Greenwich, Conn., and Pro Skip Alexander of Southern Pines, N. C., took second money in the pro-amateur tourney with a best ball of 128.

The Duke of Windsor, wearing bright orange slacks and the canary yellow shirt, finished way down the list with Locke, with a best ball of 138.

Randy Brown Fights Stribling

Randy Brown, of New York, yesterday was signed to fight Ken Stribling, Washington middleweight, in the feature 10-rounder on next Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena.

Brown won from Danny Martin and lost to Burl Carity in previous 1948 matches.

Russians March On

The Hague, March 3 (AP)., Paul Keres of Russia defeated Dr. Max Euwe of Holland today in the world championship chess tournament.

English, With Meat Shortage, Liable to Eat 'Mr. Ramshaw'

Wolfeboro, N. H., March 3 (AP). England's austerity program has seriously curtailed the ancient sport of falconry, according to one of the world's most enthusiastic devotees of hunting with a bird.

Capt. C. W. R. Knight of Roshire, Scotland, visiting State Fish and Game Director Ralph G. Carpenter today with his 11-pound Scotch golden eagle, "Mr. Ramshaw," explained that English folk these days resent losing a chicken or two.

"They used to gladly accept payment for the chickens, but now are more likely to eat the falcon," he said.

Because of the foot shortage, he said, Mr. Ramshaw, has had little practice in recent years.

In the old days, Mr. Ranshaw would catch five or six rabbits or small birds a day, Captain Knight said.

But now the 20-year-old bird with a six-foot wingspread is out of condition.

"Falcons do not bring back to the hunter as many people think," Captain Knight said. "When the bird catches something, you have to go and take it away from him before he eats it."

Captain Knight keeps Mr. Ranshaw perched on his leather-covered wrist. The bird is held by short straps attached to its feet.

Moore, Marion Saved His Job With Cards, Dyer Reveals

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 3. (U.P.).—The loyalty of two players—Terry Moore and Marty Marion—was credited by Eddie Dyer of the St. Louis Cardinals today with saving his meteoric managerial career from an abrupt ending.

"One word from either of them early last season and I would have been fired on the spot," Dyer revealed.

"We were in eighth place, you'll remember," Dyer said, and President Sam Breadon called Marion and Moore into a private conference. One word from them and I would have been through. It's significant that I'm still here."

"That's real loyalty, and I want to tell you that as long as I'm in baseball I'd like to have them beside me."

Dyer proved his worth as he rallied his forces and brought them home in second place.

That Moore and Marion saved him is undeniable. Breadon, who since has sold the club to Robert Hannegan, was a "fan." His chief forte was second-guessing the manager and it is no secret that he often tried to run the club from the front office.

"Terry came to me and told me that he'd stay with the club as long as I was there," Dyer said. "You have to be on a spot to appreciate such an act."

NHL Head Says Facts 'Warrant' Expulsion of Two

Detroit, March 3 (AP).—National Hockey League President Clarence S. Campbell wound up the Michigan end of his investigation into reported player gambling today.

Tight-lipped on any new results of his inquiry, the NHL head prepared to visit Chicago, New York and Boston before returning to Michigan.

He voiced belief after conferences Tuesday with Gov. Kim Sigler and other Michigan officials that the evidence "warrants" explusion of unnamed players of two National League teams. They were implicated in gambling of a "limited nature," Campbell said.

The investigation hinges on reported talks of hockey players with James (Occo) Tamer, Michigan gambler and convict, while the latter was free on parole from a bank robbery sentence.

Buzfuz Fails By Half as Hot Choice

Miami, Fla., March 3 (AP).—Kitchen Police, owned by Gustav Ring of Washington, D. C., won the $5000 added Damon Runyon Handicap at Tropical Park today. Sunshine Stable's Buzfuz was second and Calumet Farm's Faultless third.

Kitchen Police, ridden over the 6-furlong route by Nick Combest, paid $6.60 and $2.60 in winning the four-horse race. Carrying 111 pounds, he covered the distance in 1:10 2-5.

Buzfuz, topweighted at 122 pounds, paid $2.20.

Net proceeds from the headline event, named after the late noted writer, were to go to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund. The track was guaranteeing a minimum donation of $5000.

Ruth Sees Card

The attendance was 11,554. Among numerous well-known figures present was Babe Ruth, sporting a fine sun tan. He was in a party of 14.

Buzfuz sped into a narrow advantage over Kitchen Police, the second choice, a few strides after a good start. The eventual winner, carrying 111 pounds to the favorite's topweight of 122, got his head in front at the turn and, although unable to shake off the Rauzin racer thereafter, he gamely refused to give an inch in their exciting duel to the wire.

Faultless, which this winter has not appeared close to the form that made him one of last year's best three year olds, lacked early speed and could not close enough ground to become a threat.

Kitchen Police and Buzfuz hit the wire a half lenfth apart. The winner, which Gustave Ring of Washington, D. C. purchased from Alfred Vanderbilt last fall, was repeating a recent flashy score at Hialeah. Buzfuz went postward a 13 to 20 favorite.

15 May Start in Redland's

Upwards of 15 horses, a record for the event, may start in the Redland Bowl, feature test of the Redland Hunt's annual point-to-point races scheduled for Saturday afternoon. Although the exact course is traditionally a secret until 24 hours before post time, the events, at about 5 miles and over a variety of jumps, will start at the Martin dairy farm near Olney, Md.

Entries received yesterday included those of Marian Curran's Lump Sum and Justine Funkhouser's Big John. Louie Randle, who was prominent with his Monty R in last year's Maryland Cup, has announced he will ride R. E. Jones' Cracked Lad. T. T. Mott, MHF of Redland, will send Chen after the bowl with Miss Judy Johnson riding.

Other entries will be forthcoming from the Blue Ridge, Piedmont, Potomac and other hunts. The present outlook is for at least five entries in the pair race with the Terpenning Cup at stake. Post entries will be taken for the other two fixtures, the heavyweight and gap-hunters races.

There is no spectator fee for the races, annually the first horse competition in the East. Although inclement weather has held down attendance some years, more than 8000 have seen some of the cards.

Presidents, Vikings Play In Semifinals

George Washington of Alexandria and Central won their first-round tests in the Metropolitan Basketball Tournament last night at Ritchie Coliseum and earned the right to meet there in the semifinals Friday night.

The Alexandrians easily defeated Maryland Park, 57-35, in the first game, and Central outfought Gonzaga, 36-32, in the nightcap. The other semifinalists who clash Friday are St. John's and Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

GW Coasts In

George Washington coasted home in the first game against a Maryland Park team that set up its plays well, but made only 10 per cent of its shots. The Presidents were off to a 13-7 lead in the first quarter, and stretched it to 27-13, and 32-23 at the end of subsequent periods.

Jake Dohner was top scorer for G. W. with 14 points, but he received needy assistance from Billy Borer and Bill Smith; each registered 12. Five-foot, 5-inch Ralph Butler of Maryland Park was the outstanding player of the game with 18 points.

College Coaches Keep Eye On GW High's Ace Half-Miler

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

NEARBY COLLEGE TRACK coaches will keep an eye on the performance of Bobby Jones, George Washington High of Alexandria distance runner, in Saturday's Virginia indoor interscholastic meet at Charlottesville.

Chances are good that the 17-year-old junior will break his second record in two weeks when he runs in the half-mile event. The indoor half-mile standard for schoolboys is 2:11. Jones has averaged 2:01 in his trials.

Last week at Chapel Hill, N. C., the long-limbed six-footer set a meet record in the 1000 meters with a 2:17.4 performance. That was only 1.4 seconds slower than Reggie Pearman's winning time in the same event on the same night in the IC4A games at Madison Square Garden.

Washington high and prep schools will not make their usual trips this year to postseason basketball tournaments at Durham, N. C., and Glens Falls, N. Y. Both tournaments have been localized by National High School Federation rulings. In past seasons, Central and G. W. High would have been invited to Durham and St. John's to Glens Falls . . . Jon Dilweg, Episcopal's hurdle stear; comes by athletics naturally. His dad, LaVern Dilweg, former Congressman from Wisconsin, played end for the Green Bay Packers 20 years ago. And his mother was a member of the 1932 United States Olympic swimming team.

Hayes Jones

In spring football practice at the University of North Carolina, Billy Hayes, former Washington-Lee High of Arlington boy, has been used as first string fullback with Charlie Justice, Johnny Clement and Bob Martig.

Coaches have been named for the All-High vs. All-Prep basketball game, sponsored by the Boys Club Big Brothers Club, March 20 at Uline Arena. Joe Gallagher of St. John's will pilot the Preps. Gabe Ferazzi of Central will lead the Highs, with the assistance of Julian Colangelo of Coolidge. Gallagher will keep his St. John's backeters in shape for the Eastern Catholic Interscholastic Invitational Tourney in Newport, R. I., April 3-5, by scrimmaging them against the All-Preps.

St. John's Enters National Swim

Eight boys will represent St. John's Saturday in the National Catholic Interscholastic Swimming and Diving Championships at La Salle College in Philadelphia.

Danny Callahan is entered in the 100 and 220-yard freestyle. Ray Moffett will swim in the 100 freestyle, Baarney Wall in the 100 breastroke, Gene Kunst in the 100 backstroke and Bill Epling in the 220 freestyle.

Moffett, Wall and Kunst will swim on the 150-yard medley relay team. Epling, Jim Jordan, Bob Rogers and Jack Cornell will compete as a 200-yard freestyle relay team.

Eagles Sign Tackle

Philadelphia, March 3 (AP).—Ed Lovuolo, 217-pound tackle from Clayton, N. J., has been signed by the Philadelphia Eagles.

Terps Vs. Tar Heels

University of Maryland baseball team will play host to the University of North Carolina nine on May 7 at College Park.

Right-to-Sue Case Put Up to Supreme Court

Review Is Asked Of Restriction on Legal Actions of D. C. Residents

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday to review a lower court ruling that Washington residents do not have the same rights as citizens of the 4 States to sue in Federal Courts outside the District of Columbia.

Attorneys for the National Mutual Insurance Co. of the District of Columbia, who petitioned for a writ of certiorari in a case involving the Tidewater Transfer Co., Inc., of Virginia, declared the lower court decision is in conflict with other decisions and "adopts an unnecessarily restrictive approach to the constitutional authority of Congress to provide adequate juricial forums for citizens of the District of Columbia."

The disputed law was passed by Congress in 1940 as a proposal to give citizens of the District, Alaska and Hawaii the same rights in the Federal courts allowed the citizens of the 48 states.

Last year, the Baltimore District Court dismissed a suit filed by the petitioner against the Virginia transfer firm on the ground that the 1940 law was unconstitutional.

On appeal, the case went to the Fourth Circuit Court in Richmond, which ruled 2 to 1 the act was unconstitutional.

Application of the case has been that if an automobile accident occurs in Virginia and involves a District resident and a resident of Virginia, the concerned parties have no access to Federal courts, but must present their cases in a State court.

Alvin L. Newmyer, David G. Bress and Sheldon E. Bernstein, attorneys for the petitioning firm, pointed out the case on which certiorari is being requested is the first instance where constitutionality of the law has been questioned.

The attorneys contend that under the lower courts' rulings, "large segments of our population were precluded from seeking relief in the Federal Courts even though the same privilege was open even to aliens."

They contend there is "substantial and persuasive constitutional authority" for the disputed law, under the premise that "ours is a system of equal justice under law and that our Government, like any democratic government, must afford its citizens adequate facilities for resolution of their disputes."

Russians' Austria Treaty Demands Deadlock Deputies

London, March 2 (U.P.).—Samuel Reber, United States representative on the Council of Deputy Foreign Ministers, today rejected Russia's demands for 200 million dollars cash reparations from Austria and two thirds of Austria's shipping and oil.

This deadlocked the deputies, who are supposed to work out a state treaty for Austria which would end its status as an occupied nation.

Only Russia, it appeared, could save the meeting, and it did not seem likely that the Soviet Union would compromise.

Reber rejected Russia's bid for dollars, ships and oil after the Russian delegate, Nikolai Koktomov, refused a request by the western allies to give details. Koktomov also called for general acceptance of the Soviet claims before the talks continue.

Pelley Files Action In Move for Parole

William Dudley Pelley, former leader of the Silver Shirts, sentenced to 15 years in jail for sedition in 1942, yesterday filed a habeas corpus action in District Court here asking the court to direct the U. S. Parole Board to grant him a parole.

Pelley, now in the Federal Penitentiary at Terre Haute, Ind. claims he is eligible for parole, having served five year with, he says, a record of good behavior.

Fist Fight Breaks Up Debate in Iran

Tehran, Iran, March 2 (U.P.).—Two deputies exchanged blows during debate today for the first time in Iran's parliamentary history. The fight broke up the session.

The deputies were arguing over the credentials of a third deputy, who allegedly was sponsored by former Premier Ghavam Es-Sultaneh.

Jinks Fined $75

King Jinks, a 23-year-old driver who jinxed the court on Friday the thirteenth by going free on traffic charges when witnesses failed to appear, paid up yesterday.

Jinks, of 1150 Sumner rd. se., was fined a total of $75 by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson on charges growing out of an auto-pedestrian accident which sent two persons to the hospital.

The charges, failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian and driving with bad brakes, were refined when witnesses did not appear at the first court session. One of the two persons struck by his car, Miss Fannie O. Rupert, 78, of the All States Hotel, still is in Emergency Hospital.

Bid of $1.50 At Auction Hits Jackpot

The Washington Post

BARGAIN-HUNTER—I. H. Lubin, 1018 K st. se., walks away from yesterday's police auction with a "grandfather's clock," knocked down for $20. Many wrist and pocket watches were on the block at the auction, held at 469-477 C st. nw., but this was the largest timepiece

Mrs. Ernestine Reeden, 200 21st st. ne., emerged from the Metropolitan Police warehouse, at the rear of 469-477 C st. nw., yesterday, bubbling with joy over "such a buy, I can't believe it."

One of some 300 persons who gobbled up 247 lots of lost, stolen or abandoned property auctioned by police, Mrs. Reeden, a department store clerk on her day off, paid $1.50 for a carton sight unseen.

She discovered her bid bought 37 items, including three women's sweaters, each bearing a $5.95 tag, a cloth overcoat, three pairs of new leather gloves, three Navy hats, brown and white shoes—"all a perfect fit"—khaki trousers, sailor hats, pillow slips, Navy raincoat, and three small zipper bags.

Merchants and junk dealers from as far away as Baltimore and Rileyville, Va., paid $275 for 635 beer cases, $16 for a hill of rags, $100 for tires, $240 for furniture.

All told, the weird miscellany, unclaimed remains of the relativeless dead, stolen property of captured criminals or goods found abandoned or seized in police raids, netted $4189.

Auction proceeds will be deposited in the miscellaneous trust fund of the District for three months. If there are no claims against it, the money will land in the District treasury.

Wider Symphony Support Sought By Trade Board

Cooperation in all efforts to expand community support for the National Symphony Orchestra has been pledged by directors of the Washington Board of Trade.

President John A. Reilly announced yesterday that a special committee will explore the possibility of getting congressional aid to help finance a program of concerts in the public school curriculum.

The directors adopted a resolution urging "all individual citizens who have not yet contributed to the National Symphony's sustaining fund to make donations immediately." It also urged Washington business firms to "demonstrate their interest . . . by contributing generously."

The drive seeks to raise $165,000.

Milk Inquiry Is Recessed Until Monday

Grand Jury Hears Last of Scheduled 26 Witnesses in Price Investigation

Investigation of Washington's milk suppliers by a special grand jury yesterday was recessed to Monday after the jury heard the last of 26 scheduled witnesses.

Justice Department attorneys indicated yesterday the grand jury may recall some witnesses before reaching a decision, expected next week.

If the grand jury finds there have been criminal efforts here to restrain trade by fixing prices or shutting-off competition, it will return an indictment under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Attorney George B. Haddock, in charge of the food section, anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, heads department attorneys presenting the information to the grand jury. The division recently secured indictments against two St. Louis dairies on charges of fixing milk prices.

Two officials of the Lucerne Milk Co., a division of Safeway Stores, testified yesterday, but declined comment. They were H. F. Hall and G. B. Hughes.

Yesterday William B. Hooper, office manager of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which furnishes an estimated 90 per cent of the milk consumed here, and Harry Bender, Justice Department economist, returned for further testimony.

All area dairies have now been before the jury.

Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer and of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association has not been called.

Christoffel Case Expected to Go To Jury Today

All but the closing formalities were completed yesterday in the perjury trial of Harold Christoffel.

A Federal District Court jury is expected to receive the case some time today after hearing closing arguments in behalf of the Milwaukee labor leader by his counsel, O. John Rogge.

Rogge abruptly rested the defense case yesterday without putting Christoffel on the stand. Without explanation, he excused three more Milwaukee defense witnesses after Judge Edward M. Curran declined to permit him to read a statement to the jury.

The statement, made by Christoffel to the House Labor Committee March 1, 1947, is part of a government exhibit. It was not this, but subsequent statements by Christoffel that same day to the committee that resulted in his indictment for perjury.

In the latter testimony he denied he had been a Communist or had been connected with Communists or their activities.

'Armies Marching,' Norwegians Told

Oslo, Norway, March 3 (A.P.).—Col. Johannes Schioetz told a big public meeting last night "the armies are marching up for the next war."

Prof. Wilhelm Keilhau, a historian, told the crowd Norway needs a strong defense so the country will not be taken in a coup.

He predicted that should war break out, Russia would march against western Germany and imperil Denmark. Keilhau said Scandinavia could not remain neutral.

Slaughter's Feet Ailing

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 3 (A.P.). Enos (Country) Slaughter, the veteran St. Louis Cardinal outfielder, is troubled with aching feet. He probably won't see action in the club's exhibition opener against the Phillies at Clearwater Sunday.

Two regular infielders are not on hand. First Baseman Stan Musial is a holdout, and Shortstop Marty Marion has permission to report late.

Choice Pigeons Stolen

A thief who "knows his pigeons" stole 10 of Anthony Publisi's fanciest racing pigeons some time Monday night, he told police yesterday. With some 60 birds to choose from in Publisi's loft at 2804 30th st. ne., the thief forced the loft door and made off with "only the best," Publisi said. He valued them at $100.

Driver Caught in 2-Mile Chase Given 90-Day Term, Fined $40

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson yesterday sentenced a defendant on three traffic charges to 90 days in jail and a total of $400 fines.

The defendant was Weldon Smith, 27, 911 Hughes Court nw. charged with reckless driving, no permit, and hit-and-run.

Smith was arrested early yesterday by police after a two-mile chase by a scout car and a three-block chase on foot by Pvt. George C. Offutt of the Traffic Division.

Offutt told the judge that during the chase Smith went through 10 stop signs, drove the wrong way on a one-way street at a speed up to 65 miles an hour.

Smith finally crashed into a parked car and fled on foot, but was captured as he tried to hide in the hallway of a private home. Neilson sentenced him to 90 days straight time and $250 fine or another 90 days in default of payment for reckless driving, another $100 fine or 30 days for having no permit and $50 or 30 days for hit and run.

At the same time, Neilson held Smith for action of the grand jury under a $1000 bond on a charge of unauthorized use of an automobile.

Year's Rent Control for D. C. Predicted With Terms Like Those in Rest of U. S.

Committee Members Show They Favor Removing Ceilings From Some Units

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

District leaders at the Capitol yesterday predicted Washington will get another year of rent control, but in terms much closer to those to be applied to the rest of the country.

The District's rent control extension bill may be held up until after final action on national rent control. A simple extension of the present local law for 30 days or more would cover any lag in putting through a new one-year extension.

A score of witnesses testified in a four-hour hearing yesterday at the Capitol. They divided about evenly between calls for a straight extension of the District's present wartime controls, and for adaptation of the District law to whatever national rent control pattern is fixed by Congress.

Some Decontrol Favored

Members who heard them made clear they favor decontrol of transient hotel rooms and of new housing construction, naw decontrolled nationally.

Real estate and business groups strongly urged these decontrol measures and generally backed the idea of making the District law like the national law, with the same termination date.

Labor and consumer groups generally urged a straight extension of the present District control setup. Washington's rent control law expires March 31. The present national law has been extended to the same date.

The hearing was conducted by subcommittees headed by Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), who is also chairman of the full Senate District Committee, and Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.), chairman of the House District Judiciary Subcommittee.

Cain Sets Pace

As the hearing started, Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), a member of the Senate District Committee stepped in as pace-setter for the idea that the District should get the same kind of rent control as the rest of the country.

He presented this question to District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell:

"If and when Congress passes a rent control extension law for the 48 States is there any reason why its provisions should not be completely and immediately applicable to the District?"

Cogswell defended the District Rent Act as one that "has been held up as the best example of rent control in the United States."

He conceded "something might be done" about taking controls off transient hotel rooms and new construction, but he sharply opposed a suggestion that controls be taken off housing which goes on the market as the result of remodeling.

"Chaos" Predicted

Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) asked Cogswell how long rent control should stay in the District.

"I wouldn't venture to predict for more than a year," said Cogswell. "But if controls were taken off today, conditions here in six weeks would be absolutely chaotic."

Commissioner Guy Mason urged continuation of rent control for a year, but said there should be some incentive to increase the supply of housing here.

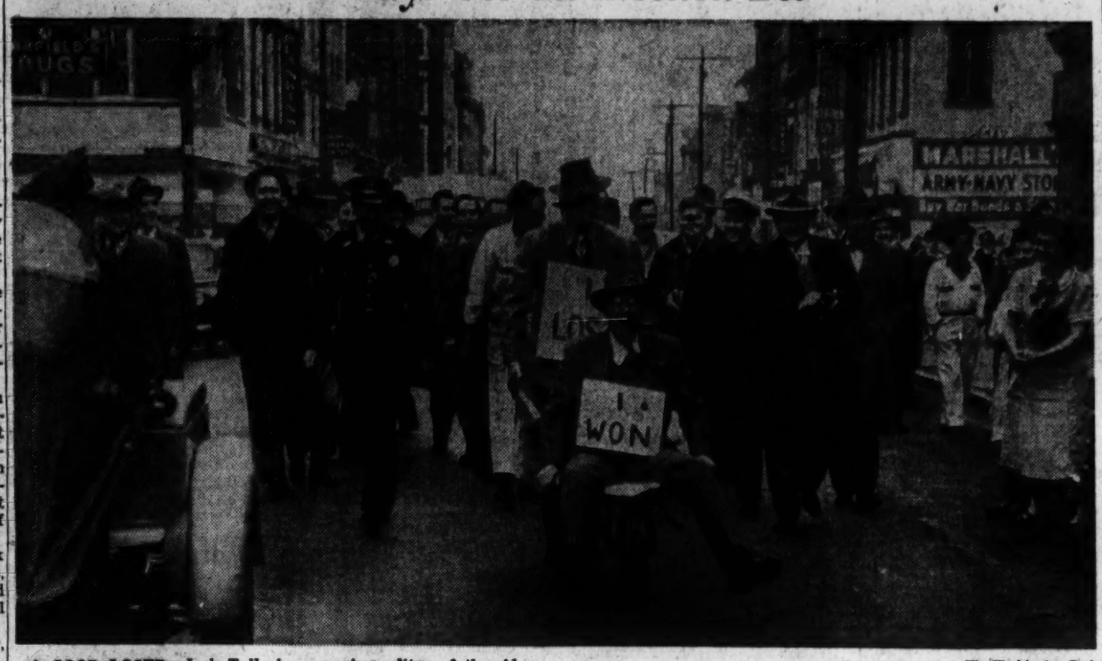
After the hearing, committee members indicated they may consider giving authority in the District law for voluntary agreements between landlords and tenants to increase rents in return for long-term leases.

But during the hearing, Representative O'Hara cautioned that if the District is to have provision for 15 per cent rent increases like the rest of the country, they should certainly take into account the rent increases that have already been granted here by Cogswell's office.

Faculty Teams Lose

The Anacostia High faculty basketball teams, men's and women's, lost to student teams yesterday. The boys' varsity won, 44-34, and a student team selected from girls' gym classes beat the faculty women, 23-15.

Alexandria Editor Pays Off an Election Bet



The Washington Post

A GOOD LOSER—Jack Tulloch, managing editor of the Alexandria Gazette, pushes Joseph W. Tulloch backed the ward method of electing the city council in Tuesday's referendum. Alexandrians watch the spectacle

Corning Calls For Teacher Pay Raises

Increases Should Equal Those of U. S. Government, He Says

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A cost of living pay raise for teachers equal to whatever may be granted Federal employes was advocated yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning.

Dr. Corning told the Board of Education that he opposed a bill now before Congress that would grant teachers an annual pay raise of $1000.

The board at its semimonthly meeting requested the Corporation Counsel to appeal a District Court decision which exempted 38 nonresident students attending Woodrow Wilson High School from paying tuition.

The court ruled that the students would not have to pay because they registered for classes on or before July 25th, effective date of the 1948 Appropriations Act which ended free schooling for out-of-town pupils.

Board Member Adelbert W. Lee said that he doubted the wisdom of asking for more money for teachers "at a time when the District is having difficulty finding revenue to meet its budget."

Board President Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle referred Corning's recommendation to the board's committees on personnel and legislation and directed them to hold open hearings at which teachers will be permitted to express their views.

In other actions yesterday the board:

Promoted Mrs. Louis A. Chadwick, 6301 16th st. nw., teacher of commercial subjects at Paul Junior High School, to assistant principal of Eliot Junior High School.

Scheduled the annual cadet competitive drill for May 19 and 20 for the Negro schools and May 25 and 26 for the white schools.

Accepted the gift of a strip of land from the National Parks Service for a playground at the Beers School, Alabama ave. and 36th pl. se.

Fair and Freezing Predicted Today; Rain Tomorrow

Temperatures were expected to touch freezing early this morning, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. The day generally will be fair, the bureau said.

For tomorrow, rain, possibly mixed with snow, is scheduled.

Lowest temperature tonight will be 32 degrees, says the bureau, which has been hitting it right on the nose after a shaky early-February start. A high temperature of 46 is expected.

Lowest temperature in the District yesterday was 33 at 8 a.m., with a high of 41 recorded at 4:15 p.m.

Atlantic City Flights Start

Eastern Air Lines yesterday inaugurated passenger, mail, express and freight service into Atlantic City, N. J. Harrison Knapp, traffic and sales manager, said it launched the first and only regularly scheduled air service to that city since since before World War II. Flights leave Washington daily at 6:25 a.m., 2:40 p.m. and 5 p.m.

P-TA Meets Tonight

The importance of mental hygiene in juvenile protection will be discussed by Dr. Hanna Colm, clinical psychologist of Children's Hospital, at a meeting of the Robert E. Lee School Parent-Teacher Association tonight at 8 o'clock at the school in Arlington.

Alexandria Councilman Quits Race, 2 Undecided After Vote

One Alexandria city councilman yesterday withdrew from the forthcoming Democratic primary for council nominees and two others were on the fence as a result of Tuesday's victory for at-large council elections.

Edward W. Downey, Sixth Ward councilman, last night said he would definitely not enter his name in the April 6 primary. The general council election will be June 8.

Vice Mayor George K. Bender, Fourth Ward, and John J. Ewald, Third Ward, said they were undecided.

All three had previously said they would seek nomination for reelection. Three other ward councilmen had counted themselves out before the referendum.

The only candidate to file yesterday was Marshall J. Beverley, who had announced last month from the Fourth Ward. All candidates, including those who filed from wards before the referendum, must file with the City Treasurer and Democratic Committee by March 7.

Another result of Tuesday's vote was a wheelbarrow ride down King st., in the heart of Alexandria's business center, yesterday at 10 a. m.

John W. Tulloch, at-large councilman who had backed the ward plan of election, pushed Chamber of Commerce President Joseph W. Phillips from the Alexandria Gazette office two blocks to Shuman's Bakery.

Irvin M. Hufford, chairman of the at-large campaign, hailed the election as committing Alexandria to "a forward-looking progressive program."

The official vote as certified yesterday to the Circuit Court was as reported yesterday: At-large plan, 2757; ward plan, 1710.

Witness Surprises

Abortion Case Prosecution Hits Snag

The Government's case against Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., Washington physician charged with performing illegal operations on a 37year-old Washington woman, yesterday struck a snag virtually as soon as the trial got under way.

Prosecutor Charles Murray was surprised when his star witness, James P. Fox, a cab driver of 233 Kentucky ave. se., testified that Dr. Peckham was not the physician with whom he had dealt as go-between in the abortion deal.

Peckham, who was acquitted with Attorney James J. Laughlin a month ago on charges of performing an abortion on the lawyer's former sweetheart, is charged this time with performing the same type of operation on Mrs. Hubert Stottlemyer in his office, 428 8th st. se., last January 3, and again at the Stottlemyers' former residence, 240 Van Buren st. nw., January 5.

Stottlemyer testified that he gave Fox $250 to arrange for an abortion on his wife.

The trial will continue today before Associate Justice David A. Pine in District Court.

House Group Backs Permanent Wac Bill

By the United Press

A House Armed Forces Subcommittee voted yesterday to make Wacs, Waves and Women Marines permanent parts of the armed services.

It approved the bill, 6 to 3, after hearing indorsements by top-ranking military leaders and vigorous objection from women's groups and other organizations.

Chairman Paul W. Shafer (R., Mich.) predicted the bill would win easy approval of the full committee.

French Premier to Seek 7th Vote of Confidence

Paris, March 3 (NYHT).—Premier Robert Schuman demanded and won cabinet approval today for a move to stake the existence of the government for the seventh time on a vote of confidence before the National Assembly.

He intends to call for this vote Monday in defense of the law compelling Frenchmen either to subscribe to a forced loan for reconstruction or to pay a confiscatory super-tax on their profits.

Trial Ordered On Real Estate Fee-Fix Charge

Judge Letts Rejects Government Motion For Injunction Now

Government charges of brokerage fee-fixing lodged against the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the Washington Board must come to trial, Associate Justice F. Dickinson Letts ruled in District Court yesterday.

The ruling, in the form of memorandum opinion, rejected a Department of Justice motion that the court issue summary judgment in favor of the Government in the form of an injunction to halt the alleged fee-fixing without formality of a trial.

In their motion, Government attorneys had contended that the real estate boards virtually admitted fee-rigging in violation of aintitrust laws.

It was charged that the association required its twenty-eight thousand members to follow price scales set by local boards and thus must bear partial responsibility for the high cost of housing.

Attorneys for the boards in denying the allegations asserted that the individual boards and their members merely are advised to charge "fair and reasonable rates."

In the informal memorandum, Letts wrote:

"The pleadings disclosed genuine issues as to material facts which make a trial necessary. Since the case must be heard on its merits, the court concludes this is not an opportune time to discuss the law of the case."

Yesterday's move concerned civil action against the boards. A District Court trial on criminal charges of anti-trust law violation is due to open March 15.

The real estate organizations were indicted by a Federal Grand jury here last August 27.

Hungarian Parliament Ratifies Soviet Treaty

Budapest, Hungary, March 3 (A.P.). Parliament unanimously ratified today the Hungarian-Russian treaty of friendship and mutual assistance. The accord was signed February 18 in Moscow.

Jozsef Revai, leading Communist member, told Parliament:

Funds Urged For Start on Slum Program

Senate Subcommittee Asked to Restore Slashes by House

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday heard Federal and District officials appeal for funds for an early start on Washington slum clearance.

The witnesses asked that the subcommittee, headed by Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.), restore to the independent offices appropriation bill all the $3,461,500 for Washington slum clearance which the House knocked out.

Grant Among Witnesses

Among the witnesses were Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, whose agency is asking $61,500 for slum clearance planning, and officials of the District Redevelopment Land Agency. It has asked $3,400,000, mostly for buying land in the Barry Farms and Marshall Heights sections of Washington to start the slum clearance program.

Appearing for the land agency were Mark Lansburgh, chairman; Edward A. Dent, District tax assessor, and Richard R. Atkinson, members of the agency.

William H. Cary, jr., director of public health engineering for the District Health Department, said a survey of Marshall Heights showed 88 per cent of the dwellings need either major repairs, complete rehabilitation or demolition.

Cases Are Cited

Cary said one man built a house out of 52 discarded telephone booths. He said one family travels a block to toilet facilities and pays $1 a week to use them.

Senator Reed indicated he would be cool to the idea of providing the slum clearance funds. He said he knew of no other large city which is "less bedeviled with slums" than Washington. He said the witnesses would probably have to exercise their "persuasive powers" on the House.

Clark Promises More Suits Over State Tidelands

By The Associated Press

Attorney General Clark said yesterday the Government plans to file suits "in the near future" against other States than California for title to tidelands.

The Supreme Court's decision in the Government's suit against California was, he said, that submerged coastal lands "belong to the United States."

Under questioning by Representative Gossett (D., Tex.), Clark said suit was contemplated specifically against Texas and Louisiana "and possibly two or three other Gulf States." He admitted Texas might have some special defense, due to the terms on which it came into the Union.

Clark made the statement to a Joint House-Senate Judiciary Committee as he opened Administration opposition to legislation which he said would donate to the States the rights of the Federal Government in the submerged lands along the coasts.

He said filing of the suits was his duty, "no matter how personally uncomfortable."

Chief Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court of Appeals will will be crowded out of a courtroom into his chambers today to hear Municipal Court cases.

The Street Singer

Tracy Loses Brentwood Control Fight

A. Arthur Tracy, pioneer radio's "Street Singer," yesterday lost his court fight here for controlling interest of the five-million-dollar Brentwood Village apartment community at 14th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne.

District Court Judge F. Dickinson Letts, in an informal memo, dismissed Tracy's claim of full ownership, ruling that "preponderance of evidence" satisfied the court that disputed stock transfers were valid.

At the same time, Judge Letts ordered appointment of an auditor to make accounting of all money received from Tracy by his brother-in-law, Mathew K. Stevens, Philadelphia lawyer, principal defendant. The melancholy-voiced singer later termed this "the most important part of my case."

Tracy asked the court, in August, 1946, to set aside transfers of 48 per cent of the stocks to Stevens and 4 per cent to William J. David, of Brentwood, charging they were made without his knowledge while Stevens acted as his attorney, from 1938 to 1944.

He subsequently contended that Stevens and David were entitled only to 16 and 4 per cent, respectively, instead of 48 and 4 per cent.

Tracy's ownership of the remaining 48 per cent was never in dispute.

Tracy, who has lived in Washington for a year and a half, resides at the Dorchester House, 2480 16th st. nw.

County Coroner Dr. Nelson Podolnick said he would conduct his inquest into the two deaths today despite Davy's illness. He will also hold an inquest in the death of Russell W. Caine, who died Saturday apparently from injuries in a traffic accident three weeks ago.

The inquests will be held at Fairfax Circuit Courthouse at 10 a. m.

The Commissioners have rescinded their order to send all patients picked up in District ambulances to Gallinger Hospital except in emergency cases, it was learned yesterday.

The order, announced as an economy measure January 28, was withdrawn last month without public announcement.

The action was taken after the Commissioners received a memorandum from John P. Sanderson, director of the Hospital Permit Bureau and a member of the emergency ambulance service committee. Sanderson said the order would interfere with ambulance operations. New rules being drafted by the committee will "adequately" handle the situation, he added.

Tait was one of a number of witnesses called before the Legislative Council's Committee on Corrupt Practices and Elections. At the outset of the hearing, State Senator Stromberg, chairman of the committee, observed the committee would "certainly recommend" the use of voting machines throughout the State.

Baltimore, March 3 (AP).—A pier and a floating drydock at Bethlehem's Key Highway shipyard were damaged extensively today when an oil slick caught fire in Baltimore harbor.

Arlington School Board Faces Three Alternatives on Budget

Arlington School Board yetserday announced three alternate proposed school budgets for 1948-49—with a top estimate of $2,442,303.

The budget figures to be submitted to the county board will be determined tonight after a public hearing in the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School scheduled for 8 p. m.

Adopted will be one of three budgets: (1) A budget to operate under the present $1.25 school tax rate; (2) one which will increase from $1.25 to $1.60 the county's school tax rate, and (3) the top figure requiring a jump to $1.75.

Elected on a platform of school improvement, the five new School Board members are asking the record top budget to meet what they described in their campaign as "vital school needs."

County Board Opposes

The highest budget figure, however, will face a stiff fight before the County Board because of the board's objection at its January 31 meeting to any raise in real estate taxes.

Of the three budgets the board will study tonight, the first, or "status quo" budget—paid for under the present tax rate—would call for a total operational budget of $1,958,495, compared to the 1947-48 budget of $1,726,375.

Or based on the $1.60 tax assessment—35 cents above the present rate—the school board would request a budget figure of $2,278,220.

At the county board's January 31 meeting, Member Basil DeLashmutt declared the board "should do everything possible" to maintain the present tax level of $3.25—$1.25 for schools, $2 for county funds.

Issue Depends on Bills

However Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan pointed out yesterday that two bills now in the Virginia General Assembly would permit Arlington to levy business, professional and license taxes. If the measures pass, Dugan said, the County Board may be able to increase the school share of the $3.25 real estate tax.

Broken down, the top $2,442,303 school figure would include the following: $48,080 for administration; $1,562,150 for day-school instruction; $32,100 for evening and part-time instruction; $135,575 for other instruction; $37,000 for activities coordinated with the schools; $6250 for auxiliary school agencies such as transportation, messenger service; $250,000 to operate school plants; $132,054 to maintain school plants; $15,400 for fixed charges; $170,000 for debt service; $44,000 for capital outlay, and $54,694 for recreation.

CTC to Oppose Any Extension Of City Service

Capital Transit Co. yesterday countered a request for increased bus service on its S-6 (16th and Eastern ave.) line by announcing it would oppose service extension anywhere in the city.

CTC Attorney F. G. Awalt told the Public Utilities Commission at an informal hearing that the company, in 1947, took in $90,000 less than enough to pay interest on its debt.

His statement was made after Vernon V. Baker, representing Shepherd Park Citizens Association, asked PUC for better service for the area bounded by Rock Creek Park, Eastern, georgia and Alaska aves. and Aspen st.

He suggested CTC either:

1. Extend S-6 "shuttle" line along Eastern ave. nw., from the present terminal at 16th st. and Eastern ave. to the bus terminal at Georgia and Alaska aves., or,

2. Eliminate nonrush-hour shuttle service from 14th st. and Colorado ave. nw., to 16th and Eastern, and set up, instead, through service from Georgia and Alaska, via 16th and Eastern, to the Federal Triangle downtown.

Baker said his plan could be carried out by reducing Georgia and Alaska line by two buses. Dean J. Locke, CTC staff engineer, said too few passengers would use the proposed service to warrant its cost.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan asked the citizens association to complete a detailed survey of area needs and directed CTC to suggest ways of "alleviating" the situation. When this has been done, PUC will set a date for formal hearing of the case, Flanagan announced.

Loudoun to Keep Same Tax Rate

Leesburg, Va., March 3 (Spl.).—No increase in the Loudoun County tax rate for 1948 is contemplated by the Board of Supervisors despite a boost of about $500,000 in the current budget.

The supervisors have tentatively approved a rate of $1.25 on the $100 evaluation, the same as last year, in anticipation that an increase in real and personal property receipts and proceeds from ABC sales will meet increased budgets needs. Property taxes alone are expected to be increased by nearly $500,000, according to county officials, while a $10,000 boost in liquor profits also is expected.

A tentative budget for the current year calls for expenditures of $429,375.43, while anticipated revenue is set at $429,448.55. More than half the budget is allocated to schools, which have requested appropriations totaling $285,000 for the year.

Responsibility for patrol of the area will be with the officer in charge of the underwater explosion research field unit, United States Navy.

Lincolnia Bus Run Extension Sought

Extension of bus service from the quartermaster depot at Cameron, Va., to Annandale will be asked by the Greater Lincolnia Civic League of Fairfax County.

In a resolution approved by unanimous vote of the league membership, its public utilities committee has been authorized to confer with officials of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. in an effort to obtain regular service on about 4 miles of Route 236 now served only by interstate carriers. J. Walter Biggers, jr., is chairman of the utility group.

The league is also making a study of the need for a volunteer fire department to serve the Lincolnia area. Nearest firefighting facilities at present are the Annandale and Bailey's Cross Roads volunteer departments, both about 3 miles from the community.

Frederick Steel Plant Layoffs Are Imminent

Frederick, Md., March 3 (Spl.).—An undetermined number of employes of the Frederick Iron & Steel Co. face imminent layoff due to an acute shortage of scrap metal, it was disclosed today by Jacob Goldberg, company president.

Goldberg said a recent county-wide appeal for scrap metal fell far under expectations, producing only about 150,000 pounds. He said approximately three million pounds were needed to meet the firm's present backlog of orders.

A Little Ham Pleases

Iris Knowles, Repatriate, Got a Parcel, Ate and Ate, Gratefully Waxed Laureate

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

A YEAR or so ago Iris Ashley Knowles was here in Washington turning out neat, witty pieces for The Washington Post on lightsome subjects like boy-meets-girl, etiquette sticklers, odds-and-ends drifting through her bright mind. When her husband, S. T. Knowles' job with Britain's Food Mission ended, Iris returned to England. Since then she has kept up a brisk barrage of letters mostly to friends who have sent her food packages. Here is Iris' latest "thank you," sent to Mrs. F. R. Tartiere, who has been sending food to England and France on a grand scale these many years.

Oh, Gladys, my dear, you are really a lamb.
Some Butter, some Bacon . . . a can of real HAM!!
Your timing is really uncanny, it's wizard:
The postman arrived the same day as a blizzard.

I loathe to sound wretched, or hungry, or needy:
I hate even more to suggest that we're greedy;
But I really must shout till my larnyx is achin'
"Thank Gladys and God for some butter and bacin'!"

I needn't go out for my bob's worth of meat,
I needn't go out there and queue in the street.
I needn't go out now and fight for some fish,
To carry rome safe in the base of a dish

(Taken out for the purpose) some very dead rabbits,
(While I try not to think of their lives or their habits).
Who cares if its freezing? Who cares if snow falls?
We're sticking it out, inside our four walls;

And gaily conceal with our butter and ham
The taste of the bread and the sugarless jam.
I hope now you see, and my greatest desire is
To thank you . . . and thank you,
Forever yours,
Iris.

"Gonzopainting" to Be Shown

YOU NEVER know what will turn up in a jungle. Almost five years ago, this department, working a brief governmental span at Manaos, rubber capital of Brazil's Amazon Basin, came across an architect called Tom Dryce. Mr. Dryce, under the aegis of a noted San Francisco architect, was busy designing airports, barracks, other buildings intended for United States Government employes scheduled to bring out Amazon rubber, then vital to our war effort.

A pleasant person, there was nothing particularly exotic about Ohio-born Tom Dryce. But recently he has come up with something new called "Gonzopainting" and is having an exhibition of same at the Bush and Weeks Gallery commencing March 7.

Gonzopainting, it seems, is a form of collage (pasting up odd bits of material) plus chemicals, then combining the result with both prints and poetry. As Mr. Dryce uses everything from sandpaper to plaster his creations are naturally extremely avant guarde. His poems, which accompany many of the "paintings" were written during idle moments on a Florida beach, when the Dryce hay fever forced temporary absence from Washington. Anyway, odd as it sounds, his masterpieces have been exhibited at the San Francisco Museum of Art, the Phillips Memorial and the Corcoran Galleries.

New Bistro to Open

WHAT WASHINGTON needs most, we believe, is a few more really good eating and drinking places. On March 11 this void is to be partially filled by the opening of the Mayflower's new Town and Country Room.

It will seat about 100, will be filled with growing plants, flowers, chairs covered in violet covered material. The decor plus architectural details have been planned by Alfred Easton Poor, who is responsible for the recently rejuvenated Mayflower Lounge.

The Men's Bar, adjoining the new room, has been kept intact and nicely done up with leather seats and other masculine-in-feeling oddments. Prince Serge Obolensky, who whirls from one hotel and restaurant opening to another these days, will descend on Washington having in tow the smart magazine photographers and writer-uppers to add zip to the occasion.

Gen. Spaatz, Brief and Modest

DECORATIONS are floating through the air these days. Latest to be honored is Gen. Carl Spaatz, who received his sixth foreign decoration, the Order of St. George, at a Greek Embassy luncheon. It is a handsome decoration, a huge multipointed star pinned to a wine-red ribbon. There is scarcely an inch of space on the Spaatz bosom these days, for in addition to foreign orders, the Air Force general has six American decorations and the right to wear seven campaign ribbons. Incidentally, getting a Greek decoration involves no official kiss or kisses, the recipient merely gets a handshake from Greece's envoy. Nicest part of the simple ceremony was the general's thank you speech. Just two sentences—in effect—thanks for the decoration, I accept it for the Air Force, not for myself.

Vinsons Are Honored At Club's Reception

By Genevieve Reynolds

MORE national names per square yard than any place in the country could be found last night at 2001 New Hampshire ave., nw. Practically every Representative and Senator were there as were the Associate Supreme Court Justices and their wives, plus a sprinkling of Cabinet members and their spouses. Occasion was the Congressional Club's gala reception honoring the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson.

The spacious second floor ballroom was aglitter with bejewled ladies. Vari-colored spring flowers, arranged by Mrs. William E. Hess of Ohio, added a spot of color as did the scarlet coated Marine Band, which kept up a lively flow of tunes throughout the evening.

Receiving with the Chief Justice and Mrs. Vinson were club president, Mrs. Clifford Davis, and Representative Davis, Senator and Mrs. Wallace White, jr., of Maine—she's the club's first vice president.

Mrs. Vinson wore a handsome black lace dinner dress topped by a string of pearls. Mrs. Clifford Davis, donned a green crepe, sequin trimmed gown with intricate drapery over the hip. A rust-colored lace dress, accented with a string of pearls was Mrs. White's choice for the event.

French Art Goes on View At St. John's

An interesting collection of French paintings is on exhibit at the Parish Hall of St. John's Church, 819 16th st., nw. Sponsored by Club de Liaison des Femmes de France, proceeds from sales go to funds for French students in America.

Most of the work is done by amateurs. Here and there are pictures which are really lovely. There are delightful still life ones, street scenes and landscapes, a display of fine French needlework as well, and most striking of all—a modern Aubusson tapestry. Outstanding in the exhibit are mass books minutely illustrated in early Renaissance style by Mlle. de la Morlais.

The exhibit will last through Sunday: from 2 to 5 today, from 5 to 9 tomorrow, and from 2 to 6 on Saturday and Sunday.

Among those attending the opening yesterday were the Australian Minister, Alfred Stirling, Miss Dorothy Stirling, the French Naval Attache, Capt. Pierre Lancelot, Mrs. John McArthur, president of the Club de Liaison, Henry de Pauer, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Douteau, former United States Ambassador to China, Nelson Johnson, Paul Guerain, and P. E. Naggiar, French Ambassador for the Far Eastern Commission.

Zonta Club Hear U. N. Speaker

Boleslaw Leitgeber, liaison officer for the Washington Chapter of the United Nations Information Service, addressed the Zonta Club yesterday on the subject "United Nations Today."

Although many persons express disappointment in the progress of the U. N. during the past two years, the speaker said, the very fact that 57 diversified peoples have been able to meet together, draw up a charter and code of conduct is a tremendous accomplishment. He added that it will take a great deal of time to work out the mechanisms for maintaining permanent peace, the ultimate goal of the U. N.

Mrs. Dorothy Scates, Zonta Club president, presided and introduced the speaker. Luncheon preceded Mr. Leitgeber's talk.

Miss Schecter Weds

The marriage of Miss Faye Ann Schecter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Schecter of Washington, to Joseph Bozin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Bozin, also of this city, took place on February 24 at the home of Rabbi Solomon Metz. The newlyweds have returned from their New York honeymoon to make their home in Washington.

Late Hours Are Amiss For Baby

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Do you wonder, as I do often, why mothers do not suspect their methods must be wrong when the results are so consistently bad? While all babies are not alike, they are enough alike so that if one baby is always different from all the rest, it must have some meaning. It isn't a case of all out of step but Jim!

Here is a baby who has a very poor appetite, who sleeps a good share of the day but does not go to sleep until 10 o'clock at night. The mother worries about the poor appetite and how to inspire the baby to eat—when it is clear that what is amiss is the whole pattern of the baby's day.

No baby should go to bed at 10 o'clock at night and then sleep until 10 or 12 the next day. True, the hours of sleep are the same, but the hours of activity differ materially. Also the meals served at those hours.

This mother says her baby wakens earlier, but she puts her back to sleep. Then when the baby is awake at 12 o'clock she gets a regular noon meal. And cares little for it.

The whole day is out of kilter from then on. This mother has been counseled personally so this column is not concerned with this particular baby but with the general problem of babies whose sleeping hours are made to conform to adults in the family instead of to those suitable for babies everywhere.

If the baby stays up in the evening with the parents, it is certain to be the subject of excessive parental attention. It may lie in a room thick with smoke. It may be taken out to neighborhod movies or to visit friends, because, the parents argue to themselves—he or she is awake anyway, so why should we deny ourselves recreation?

Noise, lights, poor air, uncomfortable positions, rewards for being quiet—all of these make up an unnatural and unwholesome environment for a small baby.

The baby's place is in bed beginning at 6 to 7 p. m. The first meal of the day should be cereal and milk shortly after waking. There should be a four-hour interval between that and the noon meal and a long nap, then, to split the day in half. Given these and plenty of healthful activity, with outdoor air and sunshine, the normal child will develop an appetite, will not sleep excessively and will thrive as expected. It could be no other way.

Practical Hints For the Homemaker

It is wise to keep a small stiff brush in the laundry to brush out the dirt that collects in sonny's pockets before his suits go into the tub. It will make the articles easier to wash as the dirt clings to the material when it is wet.

Do not keep a stepladder that has become rickety and apt to collapse. Granted there may not be an accident with it, but it certainly is not worth taking a chance. A new ladder is too cheap an article to keep a dangerous one around. Chop it up for kindling; then you must buy a new one.

SHORT on storage space? On furniture? Or rooms? Then take a look at this fascinating new type of furniture that comes in compact units that can be fitted together to form a partition. Shelves, a desk, a radio-phonograph cabinet, a record rack, a chest of drawers, and other pieces can form a wall dividing one large room into two small ones. Or they can be arranged flat against a wall space to make maximum use of it. The units, which recently went on sale in Washington, can be purchased singly or in groups. They come in blond wood, but can be stained to suit the owner's taste

Be Your Own Decorator

Easily Made Slip Covers Will Welcome Spring to Drab Rooms

If you want your house to sing welcome to spring and farewell to drab winter a month or so from now, it's time to start making some gay, colorful slip covers.

Of course, there are many satisfactory ways to make slip covers and other articles. The following directions give details of an effective method of doing the job—all the way from the initial measuring of the chair to finishing the seams. You can use commercial paper patterns, altering them if necessary, to make them fit your chair, or make your own patterns of paper or muslin. One made of muslin is better, of course. Use a firm woven material, one which is pliable and does not stretch to any extent.

TAKING MEASUREMENTS

For taking actual measurements, proceed as follows. The wing chair is used as example:

Bring tape from floor in back of A to top of chair E. From top of chair E down front to seat C. Add 3 inches to this measurement for "tuck-in" allowance at seat. From back of seat C across seat to D. Add 3 inches for tuck-in. From D to floor at center front EE. From F-arm to floor G. From H at back to front I (2 pieces are required for each of these two sections). From F-arm to seat J; add 3 inches on each side for tuck-in. From K-back to L-front of arm, add 3 inches at K to tuck in. (Two pieces required for each section). From M to N across seat, allowing 3 inches on each side for tuck-in. From O to P across front. From Q to R, and S to T across back, allowing at each point 3-inch tuck-in. From U to V, across wing, adding 3 inches for tuck-in allowance.

For separate cushion, measure across and lengthwise. Consider that two pieces this size are required. Then measure depth of box and circumference.

LENGTH OF SLIP COVERS

The ruffle should clear the floor by 1 inch. For permanent covers follow the line of the original upholstery or the muslin cover.

MATERIAL REQUIREMENTS

To estimate the amount of yardage required, consider the full width of the material. These materials usually come in either 36-inch or 50-inch widths. When using a 50-inch width, very often the smaller sections can be cut from the side, after main pieces have been cut. Take the total of the back length, front back, seat, front from seat to floor, the side measurement over arm to seat doubled, the length of the cushion doubled. Figure the tuck-in allowances and a generous ¾-inch seam on all edges. Reduce this total to yards. Generous estimates should be used in buying the material and, if a material with a repeat design has been selected, which requires matching and placing, allow an extra ¾ to 1½ yards more, depending on the size of the motifs.

OPENING

This should be made at the side of the back leg, using a long slide fastener, button and buttonhole or snap fastener tape, applying it as you would in a placket. The opening for separate cushion should be made near seam across the back or one side on underneath side.

MAKING MUSLIN PATTERNS

Following your measurements, cut your muslin in lengths, corresponding with the measurements plus generous seam allowances and tuck-in. Be sure to follow the grain of your fabric. This is just as important in making slip covers as it is in dressmaking. Keep lengthwise on up and down, and crosswise the chair. Carelessness in following the grain will result in an ill-fitting, baggy slip cover. Place each piece in its position, and pin-fit. Place pins lengthwise, to adjust the slight fullness at arm seams, back, etc. Join all pieces, completely covering the chair.

With all pieces fitted to your satisfaction, take a piece of tailor's colored chalk and mark all seams along pinned line. Then, mark each section for identification, as back, front, seat, left arm, right arm,, etc. Make matching notches on all sections, before removing the pins. The notches are very necessary, particularly where a slight fullness in one section is to be eased in, when joined to corresponding section.

Arrows indicate notches for matching sections

CUTTING MATERIAL

Cut material from muslin pattern. The slip cover is easily cut from this muslin or paper pattern. Place pattern on material so that the motifs of the printed design fall where they should. If one uses plain material, a pattern is not so necessary. The material may be blocked—that is, cut in various sized pieces—as suggested for making muslin pattern and pin fitted in the same manner.

The seams are finished with either welting, fringe, French seams, or a bound seam. The use of welting and fringe is the most popular, and there are special sewing machine attachments for making these at home. To estimate the amount of welting or fringe required, measure all seams while fabric is pinned on chair.

APPROXIMATE YARDAGE FOR SOFAS AND CHAIRS

	36-inch fabric	50-inch fabric
Sofas, without extra cusions	13 yds.	9 yds.
Sofas, with extra cushions	20 yds.	12 yds.
Love seat sofa	10 yrds.	6½ yds.
Wing chair, with cushions	9½ yds.	7 yds.
Arm chair, pillow back	10 yds.	7½ yds.
Arm chair, without cushions	6½ yds.	5 yds.

Generous estimates should be used in buying material, and if a fabric with a repeat design has been selected which requires matching and placing, allow an extra ¾ to 1½ yards more, depending on the size of the motif.

Grandmother's 'Cool Cupboard' Needed Today

The "cool cupboard" or "cold closet" of grandmother's day was a better place for many staple foods than the warm shelves and open bins where they are kept in most kitchens today, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Dried fruits, canned foods, relishes, nuts, cereals, whole-grain flours, chocolate, peanut butter, salad oils and cooking fats are among the foods commonly kept at temperatures between 65 and 80 degrees F. in modern kitchens. Yet all these foods keep better in a cool place.

The same is true of potatoes and other root vegetables, apples and citrus friuts which shrivel, sprout and spoil in warm kitchen bins. They need coolness to preserve their freshness, flavor and food value. Cold is helpful in retarding rancidity in oils and fats and all foods containing fat. It also helps prevent aging, discoloration and mold in dried and canned fruits, research has shown.

The modern home refrigerator has done much to keep perishable foods fresh and wholesome, but few refrigerators are large enough to accommodate the many foods that would benefit from being stored in them.

The return of the old-fashioned "cool cupboard" appears to be one of the needs of present day homes and apartments.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Aware That Daughter, 17, Is Having Affair With Boy She's Known Since Childhood, Her Parents Try to Invoke Moral Order But Fail

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I need your unbiased opinion immediately. We have three daughters, two in college, one a senior in prep school. Our problem concerns the latter. I'll call her Mary.

Mary, 17, has been "going steady" for two years with George, 19, an only chid, whom she has known sin e kindergarten days. George, a junior in college, is very intelligent, handsome and popular.

Like Mary, he has had lifelong religious training, but his parents do not have high standards in moral ethics. Mary is attractive, unspoiled and also popular. She does excellent work in school, and she and George seem well suited.

Although we had no objection to George, we did not want her to "go steady" so young; but she didn't care to date anyone else and neither did he, so there was little we could do about it. Now they are engaged. Recently he gave her a ring with the consent of his parents and us.

Father Collars
Boy for Confab

THE PROBLEM: By a change in Mary's expression and attitude, to one of guilt some months ago, I knew they were having an affair. I taxed her about it and she acknowledged the truth at once. She realized how wrong it was, how she had hurt herself and disappointed her father and me. (Her sisters do not know). She said she was "weakened by love."

Her father had a man-to-man talk with George, who said he truly loves Mary and they wanted to marry this June. Both promised to quit the affair and I do believe they were sincere at the time; but I knew again—by Mary's guilty attitude towards us—that they had broken the pledge. She admitted the truth when I asked her.

She says only that they love each other. But now she says George wants to postpone marriage for a year; wants her to go to college one year. If they hadn't had an affair we would much prefer this plan, but we can't tolerate such a relationship and feel that they should marry in June.

We are willing to help financially so that George can finish college and also send Mary to college, too; but George's pride, it seems, makes him reluctant to accept our offer. We haven't discussed it with him or his parents, but have advised through Mary. The situation is very delicate; and we ask your counsel on what to do, as soon as possible.

R. N.

Girl Is Honest;
Boy Is Weakling

DEAR R. N.: Mary is more of a person than George, essentially reliable, honest and straightforward. Though she has erred, she has substance of character, whereas George is a weakling, a stinker, despite his fine facade.

Love, they say, is the justification for their affair. As to that, each loves in terms of his own personality, the signal difference being that George loves only himself, whereas Mary loves him with all her heart, in an adolescent way, insofar as she understands the gist and requirements of loving.

As matters stand, Mary is the distrait victim of George's infantile selfishness, secretly suffering more than you guess; and subjectively (if not consciously) aware, due to signs and portents, that he is of a mind—since bestowing the ring—to maneuver his way out of a binding commitment; for that's what his resistance to a June wedding and vague rejections of financial backing mean.

Outlook Risky
If They Marry

WHEN TACKLED man-to-man by Mary's father, he was too frightened, too much at a loss in the situation to do other than he did, namely, protest true love and desire to marry her and make a gesture of getting engaged.

But of course he resented being pinned down, probably a new experience for him in relation to girls, and doubtless also his first occasion to really face himself in relation to Mary, who I daresay is not his first conquest.

His subsequent backing-and-filling indicate that on second thought he prefers freedom to Mary, if a choice must be made, and I gather her intuition tells her so, wherefore in panic she is trying to hold him by resuming the affair, which certainly amounts to throwing herself away on a lost cause, with George selfish enough to be a rotter about it, with no purpose in view except saving his face.

For advice? George is irresponsible, evasive as quicksilver, a very poor marriage risk; so don't make a bad situation worse by throwing Mary at his head. They have no good future together; and the problem is how to help Mary outgrow the costly infatuation and dissolve her load of guilt. Ergo, she needs expert psychological counsel to stimulate insight and restore emotional health.

M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Cracked Dishes May Harbor Germs

It is not economical or sanitary to continue to use dishes that are cracked and glasses that are badly nicked. The cracks are apt to harbor germs and the nicks are apt to cut someone badly, if not during the drinking process, during the washing and drying of them. Get rid of them before you have trouble.

The practical ironing board cover is the sort with eyelets and lacers, or elastic, that one can remove easily to launder and return to the board with no more trouble. Be sure to ask for this sort when purchasing a new one. The material is a durable unbleached muslin which is readily washed and kept in order.

Cleaner Has Task Of Erasing Hemline

Removing telltale signs of old hemlines from dresses that have been let out has been one of the dry cleaners' chief problems this winter, according to the National Institute of Cleaners and Dyers.

In most cases, according to the institute, the cleaners are able to take out the offending mark. Among the exceptions, though, are apt to be cellulose acetate rayon skirts and dresses, since previous wear or pressing may have already softened the fibers of the crease and so permanently molded it into the cloth. Then there are those garments which have faded on the outside, while the interior of the hem was protected. In still other instances, wear which will show has taken place along the edge of the hem itself.

Fortunately, the chief problem—removing ground-in spots or soil along the old hemline—presents no insuperable obstacle to the cleaner. With his numerous special agents, steam guns, wet-cleaning and other methods, he can render most hemlines invisible.

Men Tell How to Act on a College Weekend Date

College men have very definite ideas on how a young woman should act when she is to be his guest at a house party or prom.

A symposium of students at Yale, Princeton, Harvard, Wesleyan, University of Virginia, Dartmouth and Amherst reported in Junior Bazaar discloses what the boys like and what they don't like about girls' actions on these weekend dates.

First of all they want a prompt yes or no to their invitations, and only a major catastrophe is considered a valid excuse for a last-minute cancellation.

They hope you'll get along well with the girls you'll meet but abhor the "chattering and shrieking with girls they've seen in the lab the day before. They are also dead set against the girls who make a play for their best friend.

"Often the college man turns his room over to his date for the weekend," the article states. "If he comes back to it Monday morning to find lipstick on the bureau cover, cigarette holes in the bedspread, and his favorite neckties, banner or college trophy missing (she wanted a souvenir) there will be no return engagement. Also he does not feel kindly about having to trudge to the post-office with tidy parcels of forgotten scarves, mittens or hats."

A good tip for the girls is to familiarize themselves with recent sports events so they will be able to talk half-way intelligently in the event they are called upon to watch a sports contest during the weekend.

One of the most urgent recommendations from the men is "don't overdress," so girls will be wise to avoid too daring extremes in attire.

Another fervent plea from the prospective hosts is "get it all in one suitcase; we have to carry it you know."

"You might have a couple of reasonably good, clean jokes on tap for difficult moments," the article states. "Off-color jokes and truck-driver language do not give you an aura of sophistication. They either discomfort your host or confuse his chaste mental image of you.

"Also there undoubtedly will be one stock phrase which becomes the cliche of the weekend. If you can still laugh when it's uttered for the thousandth time, you'll have earned a reputation for a grand sense of humor."

Your Questions On Homemaking

I came here last summer and brought a cracker-box GI house with what is laughingly described as "hardwood" floors. They were extremely bare, so my wife gave them a coat of orange shellac (fortunately, I can't paint) and I gave them a heavy coat of paste wax and a big dose of a heavy, power-brush polisher. They looked fine at the time. By now, the wax and the shellac are all worn off, except in odd corners where no man nor beast treads. Our "fairways" are positively white, yet there are vestigial remnants of the shellac on the untraveled portions. I have now visited a friend whose floors have been treated with a special floor finish, then waxed, and look splendid. I intend to fix our floors the same, but the question is how to get rid of the shellac that still sticks to the untraveled portions of the floor. What I want to know is whether a petroleum solvent will do the trick, which I doubt, or will I have to use alcohol to get the stuff off? If you can give me a simple solution to my problem, preferably one involving very little work, I'll be most happy.

Incidentally, my wife tells me a recurrent question in your column is "how to shine Mexican tin plate." I don't know what your answer is, but mine is: Don't bother—nothing works." I've tried everything but rubbing it with a Mexican, and although it can be gotten cleaner, it can't possibly compare with any solid metal article, properly burnished and shined.

No, petroleum solvent won't soften the shellac. You'll either have to use alcohol or a special cleaner and bleach sold by several local stores. The latter comes in powder form, to be dissolved in boiling hot water and mopped on the floor. The shellac can then be easily removed with a scraper or steel wool. Enough to remove all the finish from a medium-sized floor can be bought for about 60 cents, and you don't have to bother with fumes or flammability as you do with alcohol. It will bleach the wood slightly, which you may or may not want. One store selling the cleaner can be reached by calling National 6386.

How can I keep brown sugar from caking? I have tried keeping it in the refrigerator after the package is opened, but that didn't seem to work for me.

E. C. R.

Keeping brown sugar in a large jar along with dried prunes is a good idea. The prunes keep the sugar from turning hard and the sugar sweetens the prunes. Easy ways of reclaiming hardened sugar include putting it in a tightly closed jar with a piece of fresh bread or with one or two juicy lettuce leaves.

I have just acquired a set of table silver and am puzzled by what the manufacturer calls a "viande" knife and fork. Both are the same length as a dinner knife and fork, but the fork has short tines like a salad fork and the hollow-handled knife has a very short blade as has a steak knife. As there is no dinner knife or fork in the set, am I correct in using this viande knife and fork in their place? Or does it have some particular purpose?

K. A. C.

Viande knives and forks have been made by some manufacturers as an innovation to substitute for the smaller-sized dinner knives and forks, so you are perfectly correct in your use of them.

In regard to A. K. B.'s question in your column recently about a product to remove lipstick, perhaps she's heard about a liquid lipstick which has a remover with the set. I don't think this would work on ordinary cream rouge, though. It's sold in several department and drug stores in Washington.

T. B.

How can I remove zinc ointment from some bright blue gabardine slip covers? M. P.

You should be able to take out the spots with dry-cleaning fluid.

Do you know where in Washington I can find a water repellant that I can use at home for treating work clothes, a light rain coat and other articles of clothing? I understand it is hard to buy in small enough packages to make it a practical purchase for home use.

T. G.

One repellant that is easy to use at home in treating clothes and other materials is available through a local manufacturers' representative, who sells it at retail in fairly small quantities. He can be reached by telephoning Victor 6098 in the evenings.

When should tablecloths be used and when table mats?

S. F.

A white tablecloth—damask, according to the old tradition—is the proper covering for the table at formal dinners and holiday feasts. A tablecloth of lace or some other material is usually used on the serving table at a tea or reception. Otherwise, cloths and mats are practically interchangeable in their use nowadays. It is mainly a matter of which you prefer at the moment. Many women like place mats because they are easier to launder and show off the polished wood of a good-looking table. Others prefer cloths because they protect the table more. The tendency is to use mats for luncheons and tablecloths for dinner. However, gaily colored luncheon cloths are considered quite correct for informal entertaining, as well as for family use at any meal.

Delegate Asks Statehood For Alaska

The Alaskan Delegate to Congress, E. L. Bartlett, yesterday made an appeal for immediate Alaskan Statehood in a post luncheon address before members of the Silver Spring Woman's Club.

"Women especially are interested in obtaining Statehood for Alaska," he explained, "because they feel Statehood would contribute toward more stable communities, improved schools, hospitals and roads."

He went on to point out that Alaska has a greater population than several territories that were taken into the Union in past years.

"Americans always have objected to taxation without representation," declared Delegate Bartlett. "And those living in Alaska are no exception. They feel that they would like to have a voice in this country's affairs."

Describing living conditions in the territory, he said that women have all the modern conveniences of radios, automobiles, motion pictures, good music, electricity and water. But if a woman has a yen for pioneer life, she can leave the towns and cities and find it in the country.

One of the highlights of the program was a clothing and food shower for a family in Portsmouth, England. Mrs. Ronald Mighell, chairman of the club's welfare department, was in charge of the collection.

Mrs. George Eastment, club president, presided at the business session preceding the luncheon.

D. C. Home Rule To Be Discussed

Representative James C. Auchincloss will be guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the National Council of Jewish Women, District Section, scheduled for March 9. His topic will be the District of Columbia Home Rule Bill.

Fairfax Judge Rejects Plea To Create Sanitary District

Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown said yesterday he will not create a sanitary district as requested in northeastern Fairfax County.

But he left the door open for compromise on a smaller sized district.

The district request embraced Langley-Chesterbrook Woods area. Residents asked the court Tuesday to create the district so they could vote on a bond issue to provide water, sewer and fire protection facilities.

Brown turned down the petition, but said he would enter no court order until both sides have had time to work out any possible compromise.

U. N. Information Office in Moscow Due to Open Soon

Lake Success, March 3 (AP).—A United Nations information center in Moscow, due to open in January, has not yet gone into operation.

A U. N. official blamed three factors: The Russian office director had been ill, had difficulties in arranging transportation to Moscow and now is having trouble getting office space.

"The Moscow office will open any day now, perhaps in two weeks or a month," the official said.

Michael S. Vavilov, former first secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, has been hired by the U. N. to run the Moscow office. His duties are to spread U. N. information in Russia and report back here on reaction to it there.

Rural Area Delegates Revive Crockett Annexation Measure

Richmond, Va., March 3 (AP).—Delegates from rural areas today resurrected the Crockett annexation bill and forced it to the floor of the House for possible action tomorrow.

In a seldom attempted move they forced discharge of the committee on counties, cities and towns, which had killed the bill, to vote it out for House consideration. The bill would make annexation virtually impossible by requiring a majority of the voters in an arear being annexed to give their consent.

Its patron, Delegate Paul Crockett of Yorktown, who led the revolt to revive the measure, said later that amendments exempting those citites already engaged in annexation proceedings and reducing required approval to 25 per cent would be agreeable to him.

The crockett bill and a number of annexation measures had been defeated by narrow margins in the committee. Other important action in the General Assembly today included.

1. The House passed the Battle Senate bill which reduces unemployment insurance taxes in Virginia by six million dollars and increases the maximum unemployment compensation from the present $15 a week to $20. Before passage, however, the House killed an amendment made by its Finance Committee which would have left maximum unemployment compensation at the $15 figure.

2. The Senate received and gave immediate approval to a bill from Governor Tuck providing for a hydrographic and biological study of marine life in the Chesapeake and its tributaries. The laboratory of the Fisheries Commission would conduct the study using public funds and private grants.

3. The Senate passed unanimously and sent to the House two bills by Senator Robert O. Norris, jr., of Lancaster, dealing with oyster and fishing laws. One would give Virginia parity with Maryland in trying violators of Potomac river fishing laws and let Virginia try Marylanders arrested by Virginia officers.

Period of Patent Tongs Lose

The second Norris bill would authorize the State Commission of Fisheries to open, close or shorten the three-month period in which patent tongs may be used to take oysters from natural rocks and shoals in State waters.

Committee actions included favorable unanimous move by the House labor committee on the Fenwick-Clarke Senate bill to bring the State's child labor laws into conformity with school attendance laws. The bill was given precedence over a similar measure in the House which was not as far along in the legislative process.

The Senate committee on courts of Justice reported out the McCandlish bill to constitute the board of regents of Gunston Hall, in Fairfax County, a corporation.

The Senate committee on public institutions and education reported out a bill which would make it a misdemeanor to deliver or attempt to deliver articles to persons confined in penal institutions without firs getting permission of the person in charge. Maj. Frank Smyth, State Penitentiary superintendent, said the bill was aimed at stopping the smuggling of whiskey and benzedrine to inmates of jails. Present laws, he said, do not cover such situations.

Washington Parkway Funds

Since passage yesterday of the State's record-breaking appropriations bill by the House of Delegates it was learned that an amendment will be tacked on to the measure before Senate action to provide matching funds for the George Washington Memorial Parkway, in Arlington.

The amendment, sponsored by Arlington Delegates J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm and Senator Charles R. Fenwick, would appropriate $125,000 as the State's share in extension of the parkway from Key Bridge to Chain Bridge on the Virginia side of the Potomac. Arlington would match this fund and, in turn, the Federal Government would match the total of $250,000 for the project.

The Arlington Delegates said Chairman C. C. Louderback of the House Appropriations Committee had agreed to appear with them before the Senate Finance Committee, thus virtually assuring approval of the amendment.

Louisiana Woman Named Director Of Travelers' Aid

Appointment of Miss Lucille Bruner of New Orleans as a director of the Travelers' Aid Society here was announced yesterday by Albert W. Atwood, president of the board.

Miss Bruner has had broad experience in social welfare work, Atwood said, having served as executive secretary of the Travelers' Aid Society in New Orleans for seven years and as district supervisor for the Board of Public Welfare in that city for two years.

A graduate of the University of Iowa and the University of Chicago, she taught social work for a year at the University of Nebraska.

Miss Bruner will succeed Mrs. C. F. Alexander, who resigned recently after 11 years' service.

Va. Bill Renews Debate Over Fairfax Vote

Richmond, Va., March 3 (AP).—Arguments centering on a tie vote which resulted in the House of Delegates election in Fairfax County last summer were renewed before a House committee here today.

The debate arose during a hearing by the House Privileges and Election Committee on a bill introduced by Fairfax Delegate Robert J. McCandlish, one of the two principals in last year's deadlock, who seeks to simplify procedure for settling election ties.

In the event of a tie, the bill would give either candidate the right to request a recount provided he pays the cost of re-examining the ballots.

The measure was opposed today by Edwin Lynch, a former delegate, who was tied with McCandlish in the first count of ballots last year, but who lost by one vote in a recount demanded by McCandlish. Prior to the recount, Lynch was named the winner when his name was drawn from a hat in a lottery later nullified by results of the recount.

Lynch told the committee he would have favored the bill a year ago, but had changed his mind since last summer's contest because, he contended, "justice becomes questionable when there is a recount and the closeness of the vote is known."

Lynch said voters in Fairfax marked their ballots in accordance with instructions by precinct judges and therefore contended the judges themselves were best qualified to determine the validity of ballots. He said the election commissioners, designated by the Circuit Court, threw out 37 ballots which otherwise might have been accepted by precinct judges.

Loaded down with a total of 24 controversial bills, the House committee adjourned without taking action on McCandlish's measure.

Baltimore Export Tonnage Tops U.S.

By The Associated Press

Official figures released yesterday by the Commerce Department showed Baltimore in 1947 handled a greater volume of exports than any other port in the country—on a tonnage basis.

Baltimore ranked second to New York on imports and total volume of foreign trade handled.

Tabulations on a dollar-value basis reflect the Maryland's city position less favorably. A great part of her export trade is in heavy coal and grain.

Exports last year were 13,624,204 tons, and 7,752,000 tons of imports lifted the total to 21,376,204. New York exported 13,461,368 tons and imported 11,983,000 for a total of 25,444,368.

Woman Found Guilty in Fires Set by Child

Annapolis, Md., March 3 (AP).—Mrs. Helen J. Lock, 42, of Jessup, was found guilty tonight of having an 11-year-old girl set fire thrice to a neighbor's house.

Judge James Clark, who heard the case without a jury in Anne Arundel County Court, said: "I want to know more about this thing before sentence is passed."

Attorney Edward G. Chaney, a defense counsel, said he had no objection to Judge Clark's suggestion that Mrs. Lock be examined by a doctor.

Blonde Louise Morrison, a frail little girl, testified she set fire to the house of Mrs. Rose Sellner because Mrs. Lock wanted to see it destroyed.

While the house was being rebuilt, Louise said she set it afire twice again.

The girl said, "I knew it was wrong, but I had to mind the things she told me."

Mrs. Lock denied she had ever asked Louise to set fire to the Sellner house and said that several day safter the first fire Louise "confessed."

Mrs. Lock was arrested in January, after Louise and Helen ran away. Louise said she walked to a Baltimore police station and "told them."

Only One Member Attends Meeting of Fisheries Board

Annapolis, Md., March 3 (AP).—One member of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, George T. Harrison, showed up for a meeting today but the two other commissioners did not appear.

From Harrison's appearance developed one new element in the troubled doings of the commission: a statement that he is "not a candidate for chairman of the commission."

Governor Lane has demanded that Chairman John E. Clark quit. So far Clark has not said he will.

Meanwhile, David H. Wallace, executive secretary, made public the figures for giving out $100,000 worth of oyster shells and seeds for this year.

The percentage of oysters given out under the 1948 plan and that of 1943-46 allocations follows:

Anne Arundel County, 9.3 per cent this year against 8.7 per cent; Dorchester, 17.2 against 17.1. Kent, 6.3 against 5.4; Queen Anne, 9.8 against 9.5; Somerset, 11.3 against 8.5; southern Maryland (Calvert, Charles, St. Mary's), 18.1 against 15.4; Talbot, 12.7 against 12; Wicomico, 5.9 against 3.1; Chesapeake Bay, 9.4 against 20.

Highland Asked for It, Gets 167% Tax Boost

Monterey, Va., March 3 (AP).—Highland County residents are in for a 167 per cent tax rate increase, largely because they asked for it.

The county found itself in a financial hole when it ordered a new courthouse built and discovered that the law prevented the borrowing of the needed funds from a bank.

A public meeting was called and the residents were told it was a choice between floating a long term bond issue for the necessary $75,000 or raising the tax rate from $1.50 a $100 to $4 a $100.

The majority favored the 167 per cent raise and so the county board of supervisors made it official.

Millions of trees are raised yearly for local markets and for export at nurseries in Canaseraga Valley, N. Y., famed as a center for fruit and ornamental tree culture.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Anybody With a Dollar Can See a Picture of Washington

District Liner Creed really started something when he told me about the unusual birthdays in his family.

Mrs. Lois V. Nine of 716 Chillum rd., Hyattsville, Md., has a similar story to tell.

Her father's name is George Washington Chapman. He was born on Washington's birthday. So was her sister-in-law, Mrs. Clarence W. Fling.

Her oldest sister, Margaret L. Chapman, was born on President Truman's birthday. And her brother, George, was born on former President Hoover's birthday.

In much the same vein, Ethel McKinney of 137 N. Columbus st., Arlington, Va., tells me that her parents were married on Christmas day, Ethel was christened on the second anniversary of their wedding, her husband was born on Independence Day, and he married Ethel on Friday (brrrr) the thirteenth.

By the way, I understand that a rather curious fact came to light during the recent George Washington University graduation exercises at Constitution Hall.

The photographers wanted to pose Dorothy with a portrait of her illustrious ancestor, and congratulated themselves on the brilliance of their inspiration.

George Washington University student, named Washington and descendant of Washington's, poses with Washington's picture in a hall named for the Constitution and run by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Wonderful!

Except for one thing. There was no picture of George Washington in the Hall.

MISCELLANY

Mrs. Mary Turner of 1441 E. Capitol st. has a pup named "Prince Scratchabelli." When the Turners go down to the bay in the summer and people ask what kind of dog Prince is, she always says, "He's a Chesapeake Bay Retriever." Thus far nobody has ever questioned that identification . . . Two clocks for the operating room and a surgical instrument table have been presented to Children's Hospital by the Tau Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. What's more, many of Tau's members are familiar figures in the wards, assisting the nurses in their evening tasks . . . A. C. Baker suggests that I could have avoided a lot of red tape by sending the donor's $5 directly to any public school not sharing in the penny milk program. I thought of that, but didn't want to be accused of favoritism; now I wish I had done it Baker's way . . . Here's a tip for DX'ers, from Walter H. Wallace of 711 14th st., New Alexandria, Va: District Liners who'd like to hear the British Broadcasting Corporation's programs on their standard broadcast receivers can get Nassau, Bahamas, just above 1500 (which brings in WTOP). BBC news is usually heard around 8:30 p. m. . . . K. H. Taylor of 3060 16th st. nw. is wondering about the identity of the pretty young girl who came to his rescue the other day. He dropped a library book just as he boarded a bus, and as the bus drove off he saw the girl pick it up. The next day the book was back in the American University Library, where it belonged . . . Here's a bus story with a different twist: When T. R. Crevenna of 1635 Q st. nw. was buying his weekly pass recently, a half-dollar slipped from his hands and rolled under the driver's seat and into an inaccessible crevice. Imagine his surprise when yesterday's mail brought the itinerant coin, returned by Driver William H. Foster, badge No. 3456 . . . I won't believe spring is really here until we get a report that the Loch Ness monster has been sighted again.

SLIGHT REVISION

The other day I reported that Interior's law library had located not one but two copies of the December 2 issue of The Washington Post.

I was slightly mistaken. Word from Librarian Gerald E. Roberts informs me that 10 other District Liners also answered his plea for help.

In addition to the two donors already mentioned, Librarian Roberts expresses thanks to:

M. S. Walker, 2440 16th st. nw.; J. M. Anderson, General Accounting Office; Fred R. Evans, 2430 S. Lynn st., Arlington, Va.; Mrs. H. C. Harding, George W. Hodgkins, 1821 Kalorama rd. nw.; Grace Hunsucker, 35 Milmarson pl. nw.; Mrs. Rutledge, Chevy Chase, Md.; C. W. Tiller, 2421 59th pl., Cheverly, Md.; Elizabeth Harris, 202 Elm st., Alexandria, Va., and A. L. Vehue, Census Bureau.

Thanks, gang. You're wonderful.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The Board of Trade's courtesy campaign moves Hank Hawkins to observe that "courtesy is the lubricant which oils the wheels of progress."

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

One of the elevator pilots at The Washington Post is a gentleman who appears to be between 55 and 60 years of age.

Just before we took off from the ground floor the other day, a wizened old fellow of at least 80 stepped into the car and briskly said:

"Number four—Pop."

Leonard Lyons . . .

(Leonard Lyons' guest columnist today is John Gunther.)

HERE are some things I have learned about the U. S. A. since writing "Inside USA":

That Montana is sometimes called the "Stub-Toe State," New Mexico the "Adobe State," Delaware the "Blue Hen State," New Jersey the "Jersey Blue State," Tennessee the "Big Bend State," North Dakota the "Flickertail State," and Arizona the "Sunset State."

That the last Baedeker to the United States was published in 1909, not 1893.

That Mayor Curley of Boston went to jail many years ago, not merely on a technicality but because he impersonated a friend in an examination for Civil Service, and was indicted, tried and convicted on this charge.

That Lancaster, Pa., was the Capital of the United States for exactly one day, and that it was once (in Napoleonic times) the chief wheat center in the country.

That United States Attorney John F. Cahill, not Dewey, prosecuted Judge Martin Manion, and that the late George Z. Medalie, not Dewey, tried the case of Charles E. Mitchell.

That Baltimore, as well as Boston, is a city where the Governor of the State (not the mayor) appoints the chief of police, and that Baltimore, as well as New York City, still maintains the institution known as the Sheriff's Jury.

That two Vermonters have been President of the United States, Coolidge and Chester Arthur.

That the city with the "shortest thermometer" in the country is not San Diego, Calif., but Eureka, in Humbolt County, Calif.

That Reading, Pa., and Milwaukee, Wis. (like Bridgeport, Conn.), have or have had Socialist Mayors.

That Chincoteague oysters come in the main from Virginia, not from Maryland.

That during the second Administration of President Wilson there were seven native-born Kentuckians in the United States Senate.

Eisenhower Backers Still Hope

By Drew Pearson

GOP politicos have learned of a highly significant conversation between General Eisenhower and Leonard Finder of the Manchester (N. H.) Union Leader, the man who received the famous Eisenhower letter telling of the general's withdrawal from the 1948 race for the Republican presidential nomination.

Pearson

After that letter, Finder received so much mail from people who still thought Eisenhower should run that he finally called Ike on the phone and asked him once again what the political score was.

Eisenhower repeated the fact that he did not want the presidential nomination but gave the impression he would not swim too strongly against the tide if it started to wash him into the White House.

Ike's greatest fear was that he might get involved in petty politics, also that any political activities by him might reflect on the Army.

He told Finder that he would abide by his letter of withdrawal but admitted that he could not and would not stop Finder from making any statements to the contrary.

"I will not tell you what you should or should not do," Ike said.

Eisenhower also made a significant statement about the Republican Party which is bound to add fuel to Democratic hopes that he can be drafted instead of Harry Truman.

"I believe the Republican Party with the wrong candidate is the wrong party," Ike said.

Note—Finder plans to issue a statement summarizing his impressions of Ike's political possibilities shortly after the New Hampshire primary, March 9.

Chaos for Palestine?

The British Foreign Office has just sent a 32-page top-secret master plan to British officials in Palestine instructing them on withdrawal from that country. A copy also has been sent to Sir Alexander Cadogan, British representative at the United Nations.

This column has been able to obtain a copy of this confidential document, and it bears all the earmarks of deliberately trying to inspire chaos in Palestine after the British leave.

Instead of turning over British equipment such as arms and armored cars to the Jews, who will be entrusted with governing the country and preserving order, this equipment is ordered destroyed or sold.

The British have now been in Palestine for 30 years but, as they leave, not one shred of cooperation is being passed on to the Jews, who take over May 16.

Here is one brief excerpt from the secret British instructions to officials in Palestine:

1. All files are to be destroyed.

2. All revenue and postage stamps and stamping machines are to be destroyed.

3. Livestock on experimental farms is to be sold.

4. Vital parts are to be removed in order to immobilize radio transmitters.

5. Postal orders and money orders to be destroyed.

6. Unissued currency notes to be destroyed.

7. Trucks to be auctioned just before final withdrawal.

8. Arms held by Palestine police to be sold to the individuals involved.

9. Armored cars to be destroyed. horses of Palestine police, and camels, to be offered to the riders at reasonable prices.

10. Jerusalem and Bethlehem jails to be emptied before the departure to Haifa.

11. "Criminal lunatics—first redistribute so that when enlarged (released) they are in the midst of their own population. That is, Arabs among Arabs and Jews among Jews."

12. All plans and field records to be shipped in 30 steel cabinets to the U. K., pending transfer to a successor.

Thus ends in futility and recrimination the tragic 30-year chapter of the British mandate over Palestine.

Merry-Go-Round

The Council of Economic Advisers has sent an urgent plea to President Truman to crack down on steel prices . . . Henry Wallace is looking around for a new Charlie Michelson to supply him with campaign material. (Some people think that's a waste of time; Harry Truman's doing a better job than Charlie Michelson.) . . . The CIO will soon withdraw from the left-wing World Federation of Trade Unions, which includes unions behind the Iron Curtain. (Too many Communists.) . . .

All Outdoors Moves Indoors Tomorrow

Armory Show Sounds Super

THE Maryland League of Sportsmen's big outdoor show opens indoors tomorrow at the National Guard Armory. All we know about it thus far is what's to be panned from publicity handouts, photographs and a critical survey of the Armory, taken at a distance and through the bifocals.

We can only report that the Armory is spacious, the photographs startling and the prose—well, the prose is glorious. "The first major sportsmen's show ever to be presented in Washington will open March 5 for a 10-day run in the magnificent National Guard Armory" is one example. ". . . spectacular and breathtaking performances by stars of the outdoor sports world" is another, and you can see what we mean. At any rate, it looks like the biggest thing since chautauqua, and that wasn't last week.

We've been reading out-of-town newspapers, too, and what did we find but an article about the sportsmen's show written by the Hon. Red Smith, L.G.O. (Lover of Great Outdoors) of the New York Herald Tribune. He wrote it while the show was turning 'em away in New York. Permit us, therefore, to surrender the dias to Mr. Smith from here on:

For the throw-away price of $1.50, devotees of the life strenuous may roam about the premises inhaling the spicy tang of motor oil, nail polish remover and hot buttered popcorn and feasting their trained eyes upon an assortment of washing machines, kitchen sinks, garbage eliminators, kitchen cabinets, clothes dryers and bottled beer.

For a small additional fee, the visiting

Izaak'd Love These Parts

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

"BROTHER, let's you and me go fishing."

Those words, earnestly and softly spoken, came to my ears one sunny afternoon on a fishing pier.

I had wandered out on the wharf, drawn by a natural yen for salt water, boats and such, and had no idea of fishing. As I watched a man slicing mullet for use as bait, I heard the aforementioned voice.

The source was a middle-aged fellow, a sea-going captain's hat pushed back, from his weather-beaten face and a pair of hairy, warty hands protruding from frayed dungaree sleeves.

He leaned on the rail with his forearms and looked me straight in the eyes as he awaited my answer.

I couldn't resist? How about you?

His wasn't the best boat. His dock wasn't Neon decorated. He didn't use past performances—what he caught yesterday or the day before. He had no frills and promised no thrills. He was just a fellow with a friendly approach—living proof of the fact that fishing is one of man's greatest levelers.

But I didn't sit in front of my typewriter intending to write a sermon or prove I'm a big, fat, sentimentalist. I was asked to pound out a piece on fishing hereabouts, so let's get along.

Fortunate is the sports fisherman who lives in Washington's metropolitan area. Within the range of a streetcar pass or a couple of gallons of gas are more than a hundred species of fish—from finger-length yellow perch to tackle-busting rockfish (striped bass).

And there's fishing to fit every pocketbook. The boy with the can of worms, bent pin and kite string can have his innings along with the man who can afford the most expensive rods, reels and lures.

The upper Potomac and its tributaries offer bass, mountain trout and other fresh-water species. The river at Washington numbers many varieties. The lower Potomac and nearby Chesapeake Bay are saltwater fishing strongholds.

Any day in the year is a fishing day hereabouts. Even at the peak of the present rugged winter, fish were being caught through the ice at several points by hardy, if sometimes foolhearty, enthusiasts.

Washington's annual first spring turnout of fishermen comes with the herring and shad runs in the Potomac. These

Bird Huntin' Is All Dog

By Marshall Morgan

IF YOU ever hunted Bob White quail, you're a Bob White man. All over the Eastern and Southern States Bob White is "bird," and those who hunt the fast, gamy little fellow are "bird huntin'."

He is the most widely distributed of all our upland game birds, being found in approximately 30 of the 48 States. More than half a million men and boys hunt Bob White each season. Virginia and Maryland furnish some of the finest sport in the country for those who go afield in quest of Bob White.

Bob White provides rare sport in combination with a good bird dog. He lies close before a dog. He scorns to run away, relying upon the natural camouflage of his coloring and his speed.

The sight of your dog pointing and "freezing" as he gets a scent of Bob White is one of the remarkable physiological aspects of the best field shooting. Almost as phenomenal is the spectacle of the dog "backing" or "honoring" the point of another dog.

Bob White lives and rears his family in the weed field near "the big house." At mating time you hear the mellow note of the white-throated cock bird. "Bob, Bob White," he plainly says. In the fall, when hunters scatter the little brown family, you listen for the call of the head man gathering his children.

"Where Are Ye?" "Where Are Ye?" the soft notes seem to say. From deep in a nearby thicket comes the timid, frightened answer, faint at first: "Here Me," "Here Me."

Logrolling, and not the kind employed on Capitol Hill, will be ably demonstrated at the Outdoor Show by The Girards, a nimble father-and-son team

Beebe's Hollywood Bears, a nationally famous act, will be on the stage twice daily at the show, at 2:30 and 8 p. m. The bears perform on the high wire, the bicycle and the roller skate

"I Shot an Arrow Into the Air . . ." Anyway, this is J. J. Lynch, the world's foremost archery exponent, who will display his skill at the show. Lynch hits 'em, moving or stationary, from every angle woodsman may make a phonograph record of his own voice, have his eye-glasses polished, drop a line in a limpid pool and hook a small tin fish by a ring in its nose, have an artist sketch him in caricature or cut his silhouette out of black paper.

Tastefully arranged exhibits which capture the freedom and flavor of the great outdoors include piggy banks, self-winding tops, bow ties which light up like the sign outside of a tavern, silver polish, soda bottle caps, toy balloons and plastic paperweights.

State Your Needs

THE needs of sportsmen with inhibitions, hallucinations, frustrations or psychoneuroses are served by mindreaders, guides who do card tricks, handwriting analysts and a machine which performs a "mysto-analysis of your vibrations by radar." Two very small sportsmen were seen gazing at the mysto-analyzer with eyes as wide as the rings of used chocolate ice cream which encircled their mouths.

"It's a machine to teach ducks to stand on their heads in the water," the resident mysto-analyst was telling them, "so they can duck bullets."

If there are any perplexed sportsmen who happen to have an extra radiator cap and nothing to do with it, the place for them is the Sportsmen's Show. There they can put in an order for an automobile to fit under it or buy a raccoon tail to tie onto it.

One of the most popular features in the show is a demonstration of a mechanical sharpener for kitchen knives. The demonstrator on duty had soiled bandages on most of his fingers.

All the necessities of outdoor existence are available, including ball-point pens, house dresses, tubular steel furniture, caps for small boys, mounted butterflies, teddy bears, stuffed bunnies, floor polish, mixed nuts, candy, gingerbread, shoe laces, hooked rugs, mechanical buttonhole makers, shopping bags, shoes, suits and potted plants.

Mistaken Identity

What appeared at first glance to be wildlife on the loose turned out upon investigation to be a sportslady in a leopard coat riffling through stacks of a frontier newspaper named The Post.

For sounding the call of the wild, a counterful of tin horns is provided. There are also toy turtles and pterodactyls, shark teeth, velocepedes, pennants which read, "Souvenir of National Sportsmen's Show," scarves, monkeys-on-sticks and power scooters.

Sedentary sportsmen who do not wish to exert themselves may stand and watch a man in a chair battle a large tuna which he reels laboriously in on a sort of small-gauge railroad track. Or they may buy Indian basketry from unhappy-looking (Hyattsville) aborigines who wear spectacles and regulation squaw uniforms.

Adventurous sportsmen equipped with nickels may try their luck at pinball.

Camping equipment on display ranges from a mechanical wonder mouse to hand-painted neckties, art needlework and 35-cent lollipops exactly the size of tennis racquets.

The Thousand Islands Bridge has an exhibit in the show, although the bridge itself apparently is not for sale. However, any sportsman who wants to buy a steel pier will find he has come to the right place.

Soon Be Saddlin' Time On Rock Creek Range

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

THE TRAILS of Rock Creek Park will soon come alive. As the weather clears and paths dry, outdoor-minded Washingtonians by the score will abandon the city for a horse and a ride.

And the day will come none too soon for many a stable owner in and around the Nation's Capital.

For them the "war sort of closed things up." And what with spiraling costs and a host of intangibles, the customer lines have not yet tossed off their slump. This winter's inclemencies did not help.

But these factors notwithstanding, the city and its environs still offer facilities aplenty for the man, woman and child anxious to try his prowess in the saddle. For the beginner, there are riding classes. Individual instruction is also available. Most stable owners accommodate with horses to fill the rider's needs—slow, medium or spirited.

ROCK CREEK RIDERS

Excellent Trails

TRAILS in these parts are lovely, especially in the Spring. Some run along the Potomac, others take the rider through wooded sections of Rock Creek Park and a few offer the "wide open spaces" of nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Generally, prices of rental range from $1.25 to $2 per hour. Most places boost their fees on weekends and holidays.

Virtually all local riding schools are approachable by streetcar or bus, in some cases supplemented by a few blocks of walking at the end of the line.

In these parts the rider wears what he will out to the trails—within reason. Some take their outfitting seriously and sport $29.50 English boots and a riding derby at 19.95. Here, too, prices are up. But the Government lass and college coed show up in blue jeans—at $3.95— and a shaggy sweater.

Local Facilities

HERE are some of the available facilities:

Edgewater Riding Academy—2514 G st. nw., about 28 horses for hire. Rates are $1.25 per hour, Monday through Friday, $1.50 Saturday, $2 Sunday and holidays. Group riding classes at same prices. Trails are in Rock Creek Park and also along the Potomac and down to Hains Point. Transportation available from 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., by Riverside Stadium bus. Telephone RE. 9566.

Meadowbrook—Located on the East-West hwy. at Rock Creek. Only eight horses now available for rental. Main business is boarding. Rate for a ride "not to exceed" two hours is $3 during the week, $4 on Sundays and holidays. Lessons available during the week—at $4. Bridle paths in Rock Creek Park. Take a streetcar or bus to Chevy Chase Circle, and transfer to a Rollingwood or Rock Creek Forest bus. Telephone SHepherd 9611.

Potomac Riding School—2615 D st. nw. About 30 horses available for rental. Rates run from $1.50 weekdays to $2 on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Paths are in Rock Creek Park and East Potomac Park. Classes at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m. Saturday, at $2 an hour; also a three-hour class for advanced students on Sunday at $2 an hour. Take Riverside Stadium bus from 15th and F sts. nw. Telephone REpublic 8877.

Pegasus Stables—In Rock Creek Forest on the East-West hwy. about 2 miles east of Chevy Chase Circle. About 25 school horses available. Specialize in instruction. Regular rental rates, $2.50 for an hour and a half on weekdays; $3 for same period on weekends. Instruction, 10 lessons at $35; $5 for a private lesson. All trails through Rock Creek Park. Take streetcar or bus to Chevy Chase and transfer to Rock Creek Forest bus. Or by Georgia and Alaska ave. nw. streetcar to the terminal, followed by transfer to Oriole bus marked Bethesda. Telephone SLigo 6096.

Ever See 4 Dogs 'Freeze' at Once?

Finally the little family is reunited into a tight little circle, tails in, heads out, alert.

Smart Little Rascals

HOMER PULLIAM and Charlie Blank and I were quail hunting in Buckingham County. Crossing a branch behind Jack and trim little Edna we eased into a weed field. Both dogs began making game at once. They suddenly "froze" tight.

"They both got 'em," said Homer. "Woods here and over that hill. They are goin' to the woods, but which woods?"

Springing with a roar, almost in our faces, the entire covey swept past us, then cut back toward the nearest woods. Homer, as the birds were entering the woods, dropped two with two fast shots.

We hunted the steep hillside carefully. Soon Homer called: "Here's one! Old Jack's got 'im." There stood Jack like a brown and white statue on the side of the gully. Homer motioned me to go on in. With beating heart I stepped forward. Out they came, two of them. One went down the gully, making for the thicker part of the woods. The other headed up the gully, flying right into the sun. With a lucky shot I dropped the first one, but the sun and a whirling shot gave me a good alibi for missing the second.

A few moments later Edna nailed one in some thick oak leaves. The bird roared out and climbed over the tops of some second-growth timber. Charlie tumbled that one with a fine shot.

The birds were frightened by now and began to flush wild ahead of the pointing dogs. We'd hear the "whir-r-r-r" of their fast-beating wings, but could not see them. They were flying close to the ground beneath the limbs, and all getting away. Smart little rascals when they get in the woods.

A Day on Big Cobbler

THEN there was the day we had four dogs in the field out near Big Cobbler Mountain. The dogs had fanned out, whipping a big weed field. Presently we missed Jack. In a little while Homer noted a white spot some distance inside a nearby patch of woods. "Jack's got 'em," he announced, pointing. We saw the white spot 300 yards away and began working toward it.

Taking slow, cautious steps, the three dogs closed in, pointing, tipping a bit closer, pointing again. Each foot was put down in absolute silence and presently there were four dogs pointing, three of them backing the gallant Jack that had trailed the moving covey from out in the weed field and then nailed them in the woods. A blanket would have covered the four pointing dogs.

Story of Old Blue

HARVEY HANNAH, hunting behind his black-and-ticked pointer, Old Blue, once got up a covey of quail that flew across a ravine, scattering widely. Old Blue went on across the ravine and came to a point halfway up the hill. Harvey followed. Just then a single bird got up under his feet and flew toward the pointing dog.

Harvey killed the bird and worked on toward Old Blue. The dog was still standing like a stone on his point. As Harvey walked in, a single bird burst from right under the dog's nose and Harvey dropped it. Old Blue then broke and raced forward to retrieve the bird. Taking the bird from the dog, Harvey noticed drops of blood oozing from the dog's side and legs. After receiving 15 to 20 No. 7 shot from his master's gun, the courageous dog had continued to hold his point until the master came over and flushed the bird he had he'd for him.

De Witt Puckett's Frank was a noted setter, so well trained De Witt could sit on a fence rail and direct Frank where to hunt by merely waving in the desired direction. It turned cold one day on a hunt, raining at first, then freezing. A flushed covey went over a hill. Frank cut into some nearby woods and did not reappear. De Witt waited for some time. Still no dog. It was getting colder by the minute.

Concluding that Frank must be on a point, De Witt decided to go hunt for him. Skirting the edge of the woods and going on over the hill he found him. There stood Frank, trembling from nervous exhaustion but still holding fast. De Witt moved in and flushed a single. When Frank broke point some of the soft padding on the bottom of his paws had stuck to the icy ground.

Spot Confused

THEN there was little Spot, a sweet-natured setter as fast as he was steady, fine nose and all heart. One day in Virginia, a big covey scattered in some oak woods. A single was knocked down. Proudly Spot picked up the bird to bring it to his master. Then suddenly the little setter whirled and flashed into a stylish point, still holding the quail in his mouth. The master killed the second bird that Spot was standing.

Confused, but doing as he thought right, Spot dropped the first bird, ran and picked up the second, and brought it to his master. With a little kindly direction he went back and brought in the first bird.

Duke was a magnificent black and white pointer, strong-muscled, deep-chested, proud and high. He had a fine nose and great speed. One day he found a covey on a river bank. A downed bird fell in the swift current fluttering. Duke was a short-haired dog, but without hesitating he plunged into the stream, caught the bird, swam back with it and proudly laid it at his master's feet.

Not long ago I saw a little 8-month-old setter puppy that belongs to Clarence Davis of Marshall, Va., point and hold the first quail she ever scented. Queen didn't even know what a quail looked like, but that something in her blood lines told her to set and hold that creature in front of her.

Queen's litter brothers and sisters pointed quail as puppies and even backed older dogs on point.

And NOW—The Sport Fan's Complete Reference Library—All in One Big Book!

As Indispensable to You as an Unabridged Dictionary!

WHO played in the Rose Bowl in 1936? Who originated basketball, baseball, tennis? Did the Red Sox win the 1917 World Series? Did Albie Booth make the All-American football team? Did Bold Venture win the horse racing "triple-crown" in 1936?

You can find the answer to these and over 1,000,000 other questions in Frank G. Menke's NEW Encyclopedia of Sports. Ever since the first edition of this amazing book came out it has been the standard reference book of sports. There has never been another book to approach it for scope and completeness. Now in its new enlarged form—almost double the size of the last edition—it is more than ever the one essential book that every true sports fan should have!

Two Books in One

The NEW Encyclopedia of Sports is really two books in one. (1) It is a complete history of sport from prehistoric times right down to the present day. (2) It is a book of records listing the outstanding champions and teams in over 100 sports.

Both history and records are blended together into a brand new volume—completely revised and rewritten—containing 25 new chapters. Whether you are already an expert or a novice, whether you are interested in football or fox hunting, dog racing or dominoes, you will find everything you will want to know about sports in this big, new book.

Settle Your Bets

Sports fans use this book not only for their entertainment, but to settle all their arguments and bets as well It has become an accepted authority—comparable to Hoyle on cards or Groves Dictionary on Music.

If you ever get into arguments (and who doesn't?) over such questions as "Who won the World Series in 1928?" or "What's the longest forward pass on record?"—then here's the book you can't afford to be without. "Believe It Or Not" Ripley once stated that "Menke's book will settle 4,000,000 arguments on sports and athletics." And he was referring to the old edition!

What the Critics Say About The NEW Encyclopedia of Sports

"Most stupendous treatise on athletics ever put to press."
Detroit Free Press

"One of most astounding books to come to our attention. Tells you everything."
New York Telegraph

"It is used to settle nearly every sports argument."
New York Mirror

A Work of Many Experts

No one man could know everything about every sport. The author therefore sought the assistance of the leading authorities in sportsdom. Each one supplied important, hard-to-find information and verified the accuracy and completeness of his particular specialty.

The NEW Encyclopedia of Sports is thus in every way a genuine encyclopedia—a treasure house of sports facts that you will want to own and refer to constantly.

Musty Film Comes Out First

Lens Needs Spring Housecleaning

By Ollie Atkins

PROBABLY your camera is stored away on a shelf or in a bureau drawer, but get it out right now, for wonderful weather is ahead and you'll want to get out in the fresh air and click a few pictures.

Is there half a roll of film forgotten from last year waiting for exposure? Just crank it through and have the exposed section printed up. The rest won't be usable this year.

With the film out, click the shutter a few times and loosen up the springs which control it. Take a piece of cotton on the end of a match stick and clean out the mirror sights. If your camera has bellows, take off the back and rack them out. Now pull off a lamp shade and insert the small bulb on the fixture into the bellows. Can you see light in the folds and corners of the bellows? If so ask your camera shop to install a new bellows. The hot dry air of wintertime heating is hard on bellows.

Check Film Size

Now head for your favorite camera shop. Take the camera with you and buy a half dozen rolls of film. Be sure you have the correct size—double check even the clerk who sells you the film. The correct sizes are usually posted on a sticker inside of your camera.

Have you a yellow filter? If not ask the clerk for a cheap glass cloud filter—K type. They cost about $1. Use this filter on sunny days when the clouds are pretty.

If yesterday was pay day and you still have a few bucks in your wallet, look at the albums on display at the shop. For about $3 you can get very nice albums which will take multisized pictures and display them to your credit.

Another tip on film. Do not buy unheard of brands. Do not buy out-dated or surplus stocks. This is good enough for the experimenters but good results will justify the slight additional cost.

Now you are all ready to make pictures. You are no Steichen but how many of us are? Your pictures will be fun to make and see and that's just what you expect. The simpler your camera the fewer errors you will make, and this means more pictures.

Don't Be Hasty

Now that your camera is ready for good weather, don't jump the gun and try to make pictures on an overcast day. And even on a good day don't get out too early or wait until the sun is deep in the sky. With your equipment you need good light. Be sure the sun is behind you when you shoot. This prevents flare caused by shooting into the sun.

When necessary to change films use your body to shield the camera. The most tightly packed roll films may get fogged edges when loaded in direct sunlight.

Most box cameras are set to focus from 6 feet to infinity. You can expect your best results from 12 to 30 feet.

After films are exposed put them in your hat or something similar you positively will not forget the very next morning. On your way to work drop them off at a drug store or camera shop and have them processed immediately. I have heard people brag that films left in a desk for a year or more still turned out well—they'd have looked even better if processed right after exposure.

Now's the time to make a snapshot of that Christmas toy—in the outdoors

Waddaya Know About Nature?

Mink eat trout and trout eat mink . . . The busy and brainy beaver is sometimes killed while felling trees . . . A lazy beaver is beaten up and banished from the colony. The outcast then wanders down the stream and digs a home in the bank. Those lone animals are called "bank beaver" . . . Although slow and stupid, the porcupine, because of its deadly quills, is feared by all creatures in the woods. The live, barbed quills which work slowly through the body have been known to take the life of big bears that made the mistake of attacking the peace-loving quillpigs.

"interested in Flying" START NOW?

YOU'LL WONDER WHY YOU PUT IT OFF SO LONG

The fellow who just took off in that trim little ship may have been standing where you are now, just a few days ago. But whether he's old or new to flying, he'd surely agree with the thoughts that are going through your mind as you watch him. He'd say that as a mere onlooker you're missing a large part of life.

Just a few hours' time and a few dollars' investment —or if a veteran you are eligible for training under the GI Bill of Rights—are all that separate you from the boundless new world of his. Why not do as he did: contact one of the flying fields listed on this page and let them show you how quickly, inexpensively and safely you can learn to fly. Sooner or later you're bound to—and when you experience the unforgettable thrill of your first "solo," you'll wonder why you put it off so long.

Thousands who took up flying for sport or recreation are finding that their one-time hobby pays off in utility, too. Farmers, salesmen, business executives—people to whom time is money—use one or another of the several types of specialized planes, and with the convenient facilities now available, derive increasing profit from such use. So plan this season to obtain your private pilot's license and get hours of fun and utility from flying.

VETERANS!

If you are eligible under the G. I. Bill of Rights, you can attend any of the schools listed on this page. All are approved by the CAA and VA for veterans' flight training.

Yachtsman's Tidewater Paradise

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

BECAUSE of its location in tidewater, Washington always has been a yachtman's paradise.

Even before the railroad snaked into the city from the east, ocean-going vessels unloaded and reloaded at Alexandria and Washington. And before that, when travel across country except on horseback was hardly feasible, the Potomac was the highway of a large part of Maryland and Virginia.

Pleasure boating here has increased so greatly in the last 15 years that berthing space from Alexandria to Kingman's Lake has become acutely scarce, although berths have more than doubled in the same time. At present, no less than 2000 pleasure craft, from canoes to 120-foot houseboats, are registered with harbor police. It is not possible to say how many of these are sailboats, canoes, or powerboats; but the river swarms with all three types on summer weekends, and the procession of cruisers past Alexandria down river on Saturdays and upriver on Sundays is a day-long affair.

SPEEDBOAT ON POTOMAC
. . . the river swarms with these

Wide Choice Here

WASHINGTON offers the yachtsman an almost inexhaustible choice of waterways on which to run, fish or drop anchor and watch the clouds roll by. From the head of navigation to Colonial Beach he can run in fresh water, with a dozen coves and inlets like Gunston Cove, Belmont Bay, Mattawoman Creek and lower Aquia Creek to explore and find safe anchorage.

Below Colonial Beach, the river progressively widens and becomes increasingly salty until finally the yachtsman reaches the river's broad mouth, enters Chesapeake Bay and turns south round Smith Point, or north round Point Lookout, for a real salt water cruise.

Small boat sailors count themselves here in the hundreds and find local waters full of fun and excitement. Owners of large sailing craft, with ample living quarters and deep draft, are not so fortunate because the narrow channel of the upper river makes handling a large, deep draft sailboat almost impossible without a fair wind. Power boatmen, who have some 800 craft here, find it possible to take themselves off on a weekend holiday or a month's vacation, living and cooking aboard, almost anywhere they want to go.

Picturesque Country

IN ADDITION to the boats kept at Washington or Alexandria by District owners, there are many others whose owners live here and maintain their boats on the Bay in nearby Maryland, driving down and back and never venturing out of salt water. The yachtsman who spends much time on the Bay soon becomes acquainted with some of the most picturesque country on the Eastern seaboard: Tangier and Smith Islands, sitting in proud isolation over the horizon; the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia, with innumerable inlets and tidal rivers; the mainland shores of both States, and Virginia's parade of great rivers from the Wicomico to the James.

And nobody ever spends much time on the Bay without encountering one of the few ancient bugeyes still remaining: those incredibly graceful schooners with masts raked almost to distortion which are indigenous to Chesapeake Bay and its traditional oyster industry.

There is another breed of boatlovers in the District, possibly more numerous even than those just described. These are the boat fanciers who do not own boats, but who are enthusiasts just the same. On warm Sundays and holidays they swarm to the waterfront, crowd the yacht basins, ask a million questions and, too often, do not hesitate to invade any boat which takes their fancy, as if it were not as much a man's castle as his home.

Kindred Spirits

NOT EVEN the city's seven yacht clubs and boat clubs have ever been able to insulate their members' boats altogether from these boatless fans. Yet the boat owner himself, if he's not deep in the bilge or sweating over an asthmatic engine, or doesn't find his uninvited guests walking over a newly painted deck, is apt to look upon them tolerantly as kindred spirits.

In spite of its undeniably high place among the Nation's pleasure boating centers, Washington is strangely lacking in some of the real essentials of boating. In the first place, there are few marine railways here and only two capable of handling boats of 45 feet and over.

Marine engine mechanics of real experience and dependability are pitifully few. So are capable and dependable boat carpenters, painters and finishers. Too often the boat owner, unable to find an artisan with sufficient time free to do necessary work on his craft, hires someone at random only to find the work botched at an exorbitant price and no recourse.

Perhaps that is the reason most District boat owners take their work to yards in the lower river and on the bay. Or it may be the other way round; so much local work goes downriver that what remains here won't support several good boatyards.

perennial visitors are due to make their appearance, depending on the weather, of course, during the last two weeks of this month. With the exception of a few experienced sportsmen who have in recent years caught hickory shad by casting with artificial lures, the operation is one of snagging.

The usual methods call for three-pronged hooks being jerked through the water—a hit or miss proposition, but a productive one, especially at the height of the runs.

A few eager-to-get-out regulars may take shots at the now-sluggish catfish, but it will take the herring and shad to really bring the masses into operation.

FROM then on, there will be fishing galore. The Tidal Basin and the river hereabouts will have, in addition to catfish, some bass, sunfish, carp, suckers, yellow perch and others. However, the first real action will not come until midspring.

The first hardheads (croakers) will appear in the tributaries of the bay and along the shores where the water is warmest, the latter part of April or early May They have been caught in numbers at Benedict, Md., as early as April 15 in other years. The peak for hardheads comes in mid-June with the famous "Gooses" in the eastern bay coming into their own.

Hardheads, however, will stick around all summer and, in diminishing numbers, early autumn.

There's a possibility of a profitable fling at the big rockfish in June, providing the spring brings enough heavy rains. Two years ago, the big stripers appeared in the Chesapeake Beach and Herring Bay areas with all the fury generally confined to the late months of the year.

However, we may have to wait until they school in mid-September. Trolling will then come into its own. During the summer months, chumming (tossing over handsful of grass shrimp at intervals to lure the fish) will make for big catches of the pan-size variety.

SEA trout (weak fish) again promise to be hook targets. Time was when trout seldom were caught before early August. However, in recent years they have been appearing early. Along with Ralph Murdock, Herb Goodman and guided by Capt. Rody Langley, of Solomons, we caught more than 50 fair-sized trout last June 21 in the bay just below Cedar Point.

Old-timers along the bay are predicting the largest crab season in years, even topping 1947 when the shell fellows made a big comeback. Ice has kept down the oystering which generally disturbs their feeding grounds. Incidentally, a friend caught 61 crabs in three hours last April 25.

Can't be long now until we can phone a friend and say, "Brother, let's you and me go fishing."

Who wouldn't?

possibility of buying white gasoline anywhere below Alexandria. No boat owner who has had his tanks and fuel lines hopelessly fouled by the chemical action of leaded gasoline on a copper tank will ever use anything but white gas if he can get it. But when he finds himself in the lower river, his gas running low and nothing but leaded gas for sale, he buys it and hopes he can burn all of it by the time he gets back to Washington and white gasoline.

New boats in the last three years have been selling fast at what seem fabulous prices to those who have spent many years on the Potomac and along the waterfront.

New boats for the coming season are already beginning to move out of dealers' stockrooms, but how good business finally will be, what with the shortage of berthing space and inflated living costs, cannot yet be discerned. And there always has been and always will be a brisk turnover of used boats in the winter and early spring.

For pleasure boating always will be a major Washington outdoor sport. This is genuine yachting country, and the yachting bug is one that never lets go once he sinks his teeth in his victim.

11 Private Flying Fields Dot Nearby Area

THE plight of the pilot who finds himself at 7000 feet " . . . and not an airfield in sight" can't be duplicated over Washington—at least on a clear day.

Booming along under impetus of war-born flight consciousness and the industry's understandable cooperation, private flying is pointing more area noses into the blue yonder than at any time in its history.

For pure purposes of an amateur pilot census, the Washington area could put over 800 planes and at least 4000 pilots or students into the air from 11 private airfields within a 20-mile radius of the Washington Monument.

National Airport, the Naval Air Station, Bolling Field and Andrews Field, not generally used by private fliers, are not included in the total figure of 11.

Solo in 8 Hours

RINGING the District, the private fields offer easily accessible facilities as good or better than any to be found over a similar area anywhere. The fields range from the three-runway turf or gravel strips up to 5000 feet in length to the single strip turf runway of 2000 feet.

Using them, in light-single-engine aircraft, are pilots who may be a Congressman, or a buck private from Fort Belvoir; a Government girl or a woman lawyer.

The average person, under instruction by experienced instructors, will fly alone in eight to ten hours. He'll have his private pilot's license at 35 hours—and considerable "book work" about aerodynamics, meteorology, aircraft and engines, navigation and radio if he continues flying for a commercial license.

Many are satisfied with the private permit, but it won't allow them to fly for hire or carry passengers for money.

Many take it up for pleasure, as a profession or for a time-saver in business.

Even the Weather Bureau cooperates; handed out 2044 flying weather days in the last seven years.

Flight Training

ALL 11 of the private fields offer CAA and GI-approved flight training, including ground school. Many of them are equipped for night flying—12 hours of which are required for a commercial license.

The cost? About $450 for the approved private course.

Another new medium of flight training is the Capitol Pilots Flight Plan, Washington affiliate of a Nation-wide flight system headed by Flier-Movie Star Dick Powell. It offers an approved course through solo and ground schools for payments as low as $15 monthly, plus the nominal down payment. It is available at several of the nearby airports.

Flying clubs, which own their own planes through membership ranging from 2 to 12 members, offer the cheapest flying—sometimes as low as $2.95 an hour.

Such memberships average $5 to $10 per month, but some clubs operate without a flight-time charge, boosting the flat membership rate to take care of fixed expenses.

40-Year-Old Club

BOOSTING this mounting interest are such organizations as the 40-year-old Aero Club of Washington, one of the oldest in the country. Another is the Washington Air Derby Association. Most of them are linked with the Washington Association of Flying Clubs, but all members of these organizations aren't fliers. Some have never been off the ground, but promotion of aviation is their creed.

The Women Fliers of America, the 99s, whose charter goes back to the days of Amelia Earhart, and the Wasps—the women who were wartime ferry pilots, add to the interest-building activities.

Newest thing in flight facilities is the budding Seneca Aviation Country Club—a nonprofit project which plans a clubroom and lodgeroom adjacent to Lee Airport at Annapolis.

Another new boon to the private flier is the gradual opening of the "Wright Way"—a Coast to-Coast, well-marked strip for private fliers, sponsored by the Washington Board of Trade and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

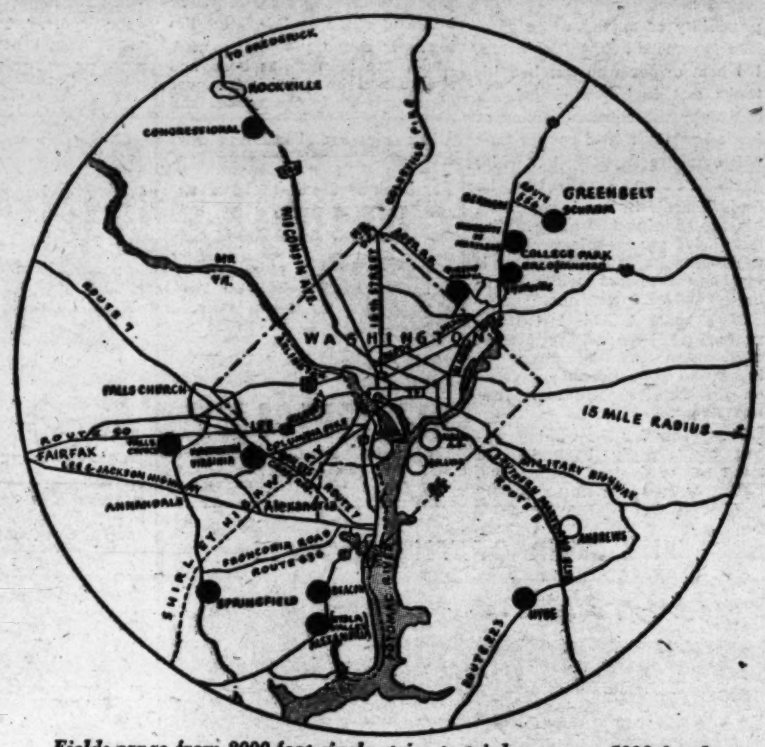
Still sought by many is an airfield within the District, but refusal of National Capital Parks to approve a proposed airpark on Kingman Island in the Anacostia River has stalled the project.

High in the promotion of air-mindedness is the Civil Air Patrol, which really came into its own when called on for home-front duties during the war. High school students are getting ground school and preliminary air work from CAP instructors and officers.

Duck Stamp Sales

The sale of 2,016,819 Federal "duck stamps" to sportsmen, conservationists and philatelists during the year ended June 30, 1947, broke all previous records, the Fish and Wildlife Service reports.

The number sold in 1947 exceeded that of the previous year by 291,314, and is in sharp contrast to the 635,001 stamps sold in fiscal year 1935.



Fields range from 2000-foot single strips to triple runways 5000 feet long
